Seek Compromise To Save Medicaid

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Budget Director William W. Wilkins has called for lower benefit levels and a supplemental appropriation to avert a crisis in the Public Welfare Department's Medicaid program.

"I am suggesting that some cuts should be made in Medicaid programs, but far less severe than the cuts proposed by the Public Welfare Department," Wilkins said Thursday.

The agency's plan to temporarily stop all state reimbursements for some Medicaid programs was overturned earlier this week by a federal court order. But the department contends it has literally run out of money to continue payments to health care providers.

Wilkins, finance spokesman for Gov. James A. Rhodes Administration, told the Joint Select Committee on Medicaid he would not oppose an advance on 1977 fiscal money to meet the immediate needs "if we could work out a solution to the long range problem."

He then proposed a two-part package to bring solvency to the department which reportedly faces a $40 million deficit over the next six weeks and $80 million in the 1977 fiscal year beginning July 1.

"Ohio benefits exceed benefits of those in other states," Wilkins said. "With the lowest taxes of any major industrial state, we cannot afford to be the leader in spending."

Rather than stop payments altogether, he recommended cutting back up to $50 million in benefits and the institution of a copayment plan requiring the recipient to share a small part of the cost. He did not single out any of the benefit plans that might be affected, saying that should come from the welfare department.

In addition, the 32-year-old budget chief said he would study the budgets of other agencies to determine how much money could be skimmed from low priority programs for a welfare supplemental appropriation.

He is expected to present some specifics when the legislative committee meets next Wednesday.

The department originally proposed halting state reimbursements to health care providers of psychological, dental, therapy and pharmaceutical services.

Meanwhile, Sarah Skurow of Auditor Thomas E. Ferguson's office, said the welfare department had overpaid county welfare offices by as much as $15 million.

Welfare Fiscal Officer William Stone did not dispute the figure, but said the funds should be viewed as "over-advancements" that would be offset in succeeding state payments.

Miss Skurow also said Ohio hospitals owed the state agency $1.1 million in debts dating back to 1967 and another $1.1 million was due the welfare department from the federal social security office.

"We're not able to get what we feel is adequate information to find out where the problem lies," she said of the auditor's dealings with the welfare officials.

Tour Madison Landfills

By DAVE AMEY
Herald City Editor

Three government operated landfills in Madison County were toured Thursday by Mrs. Linda Stevenson, chairman of a special select committee charged with finding a solution to the disposal of solid waste in the county.

The tour, arranged by the Pickaway County Health Department, was aimed at showing how adjacent areas have been successfully tackled what is becoming a major problem across the nation.

The biggest of the three landfills is owned and operated by the City of London, expressly for its 7,000 residents, as are water supplies and sewage disposal. However, the dump is open to anyone in the county at a higher cost.

The landfill is located on a 283-acre farm which was purchased about eight years ago by London City Council for recreation land. It is located within the corporate boundaries of the city, although the main operation is carried out in a 10-acre tract in the heart of the property.

Between five and 10 acres of land has been used for the trench-type landfill in the eight years, according to Madison County Sanitarian Tom Alexander.

City employees, using city-owned equipment, collect garbage once a week from residents and once a day from businesses and industry. An operator uses a special implement to compact the garbage at the landfill, and covers it with dirt after each load. The landfill is open 5½ days a week.

The city has already begun reclaiming portions of the landfill that are filled to capacity. After the final layer of dirt is applied, the land is disced and seeded.

It can then be used, Alexander said, for farming, recreation, or the construction of one-story buildings.

The farm land also serves as the city service department storage and maintenance area. There are two fenced baseball fields near the landfill, and the remainder of the land is contracted for farming to bring additional funds into the city treasury.

Two other landfills in the county are owned by township trustees.

One, located about three miles from the London city limits, is owned by three townships.

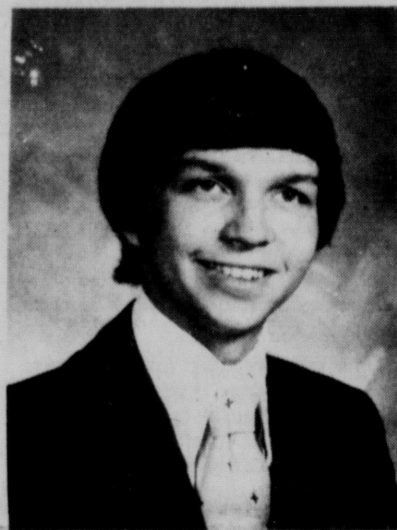

Residents within the owning townships can dispose of their solid waste free of charge one day a month during winter months and twice a month in warmer weather.

The landfill also accepts garbage from non-residents.

The other, about 10 miles from town, is owned by two townships expressly for use by residents. It is built on the site of an abandoned quarry.

Private contractors perform the covering and compacting work for the townships at both landfills, Alexander said.

Dan Stevens Wins Hamrick Scholarship

DANIEL STEVENS

Daniel Stevens, a senior at Logan Elm High School, was awarded the Hamrick Youth Memorial Scholarship Thursday.

The sixth recipient of the scholarship, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene R. Stevens, Route 5.

Stevens plans to enter Ohio State University this fall and major in physical therapy.

At Logan Elm, he is active in the student council, a member of the Skhanda yearbook staff, the bowling club, the scholarship team. He was the official school photographer for football and was a member of the case of the junior class play.

Stevens spearheaded a drive to raise funds for the school to acquire a tomahawk from the Pickaway County Easter Seal Society. Through his efforts nearly $700 was donated by students toward the tomahawk.

He is a member of the Church of Christ, the Order of DeMolay and is a Red Cross volunteer.

He tutored a student one summer and has worked at Big Bear for the past two years to earn money. He has four brothers.

Other recipients of the Hamrick scholarship are Jerrold Fields, a graduate of Bowling Green State University and an industrial arts teacher at Westfall; Marilyn Marshall, a senior at Miami University; Debbie Krahn and Theresa Stebleton, both students at Ohio State University, and Lowell Hunter, a student at Ohio University.

In addition to the scholarship, the Hamrick Youth Memorial Fund also benefits 4-H and other youth programs throughout the county.

New Credit Rule Goes Into Effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the new car you just bought is a lemon, federal regulations that take effect today mean you may not have to pay off the bank or loan company that financed it.

The regulations end the 200-year rule of a marketplace philosophy known as "holder-in-due-course," which forced consumers to pay for products bought on credit even if the products were not delivered or broke down.

The new rules, promulgated by the Federal Trade Commission six months ago, make creditors just as liable for customer satisfaction as the original seller.

Under "holder-in-due-course," a consumer who sought to withhold payment for unsatisfactory goods or services was not able to do so if he or she owed the money to a creditor rather than the original seller.

"Many creditors are participants in the ... practice (and) it is unfair and deceptive," the FTC said in issuing the new rules last November. The new FTC regulations seek to remedy that situation.

If the new car you bought today breaks down tomorrow, you can now stop payment to the bank or credit agency which extended the loan for the car.

The rules allow the consumer to stop payment and demand a refund of previous installments in cases where he can reasonably demonstrate that the purchase was never delivered, was damaged or was fraudulently represented in the sale. Courts remain the final arbiter.

FTC spokesmen have said the new rules do not mean that a buyer cannot be sued for the unpaid balance of a bill, but that it gives a consumer a strong defense if the evidence shows the product was defective.

Installment sales purchases, beginning today, must include a conspicuous notice relating the consumer's right to assert legitimate complaints against any credit company which purchases a contract from the original seller.

The FTC has said it does not believe the new rules will cause interest rates to rise or reduce the availability of credit. "What is more likely," said FTC Bureau of Consumer Protection chief Joan Benstein, "is that this rule will make it more difficult for predators who rely on misrepresentation and high-pressure tactics to sell inadequate products."

Three Grades Eliminated At Corwin Street School

By SUE BOYER
Herald Staff Writer

The Circleville Board of Education was forced to adjourn its meeting Thursday night to the junior high school auditorium to accommodate the many visitors who attended. Most of those present were concerned about the item on the agenda which called for the transfer of grades one, two and three from Corwin Street School to South Court Street and Mound Street Schools.

Superintendent Fritz Jacobs pointed out in his recommendation concerning the transfer that the class sizes at Corwin had decreased to the point that it is economically infeasible to continue classes there. He also pointed out that even though there were also few students in the fourth grade, he felt it better to make the cut-off point between the primary and intermediate grades.

Visitors voiced their concern about the safety of the students crossing the railroad tracks. The motion made by board member John Farthing remedied this problem. Action was taken to accept the superintendent's recommendation to transfer the three grades with bus transportation being provided to South Court Street School.

Farthing's motion also stipulated that there be five teachers assigned to the first grade classes in the two schools if enrollment exceeds 27 students per teacher. The number of first graders per class was also a problem discussed by the board and the visitors. Jacobs and Donald Metzler, elementary supervisor, commented that it had always been school policy to keep classes less than 30 students or provide a teacher's aide.

The board also decided to take a second look at the situation at the first of August. Jacobs said that the transfer would not cause any of the teachers to be released but would cause them to be reassigned. He also said that the transfer would save the district approximately $30,000.

Under the new assignment, students living on West Corwin Street from Scioto to Washington Streets will attend South Court Street School. All pupils living north of Corwin Street on Court, Washington, Pickaway and east of Washington Street will be assigned to Mound Street School. Jacobs pointed out that none of the distances would be more than a mile which is the legal walking distance.

In other action during the meeting, the board approved the transfer of students north of and including Fairlawn Drive and a section of Ridgewood Drive to Nicholas Drive School instead of Atwater School. Only those students who live more than a mile from Atwater in this area are affected.

Those families whose children now attend Atwater will be allowed to continue attendance there but the board will not provide transportation. New residents moving into the area will be assigned to Nicholas Drive School.

Tom Reed, a representative from Harder-Reed Architects, was present at the meeting to present plans and specifications for remodeling to the junior high school offices and replacement of the floor in the auxiliary gymnasium. The board approved the plans and decided to meet June 16 in special session to award the contract. The bids will be opened on June 14.

Reed said the gym floor would cost about $6,500 and the renovation of the principal and assistant principal's offices, general office, conference room, audio visual storage and other office and storage areas would cost just over $12,000. He also said he ex-

Reagan Seeks Crossover Votes In Michigan

By WALTERS R. MEARS

Ronald Reagan is playing for the Democratic crossover vote in Michigan's key presidential primary, saying that America's problems cross party lines and so should the voters.

It could be an important factor in his challenge in President Ford's home state, where Jimmy Carter and Morris Udall are wooing those same voters as they square-off next Tuesday in the Democratic primary.

Ford today was embarking on a campaign journey to Johnson City and Memphis, Tenn., Louisville, Ky., and Michigan, where he begins his whistle-stop train tour through the state on Saturday.

Carter today is meeting AFLCIO President George Meany for the first time — a session that could be the key to winning enthusiastic support from organized labor if he captures the Democratic nomination.

Both Ford and Reagan hope a victory in Michigan will send their campaign on the road to victory at the GOP convention. Carter wants a victory to consolidate his position as Democratic front-runner following this week's loss in Nebraska and to stymie Udall's bid.

"We have to win a state like Michigan," Ford has said. Most observers agree that a loss to Reagan in his home state could cripple Ford's campaign effort.

Four of Reagan's victories over Ford have come in states that do not register voters by party and — like Michigan — permit voters to choose candidates from either party during primary election balloting.

The President, too, has invited Democratic voters to cast Republican ballots for his cause. But the odds are that Democrats who choose to vote Republican in Michigan will do more for Reagan than for Ford. "I don't think it will hurt us," Reagan said in Battle Creek Thursday.

Reagan and Ford seek the votes of past supporters of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, who won Michigan's Democratic primary in 1972 but has been all but eliminated as a factor in the 1976 campaign.

Reagan campaigned today in Flint and Detroit, winding up his 25-hour mission in Ford's home state. His effort is built around personal appearances and $50,000 worth of weekend television broadcasts.

Meanwhile, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., demanded that the Ford campaign stop using tapes of Goldwater criticizing Reagan's position on the Panama Canal, it was learned. The Ford campaign complied.

Goldwater told a news conference 10 days ago that Reagan's statements opposing the administration's Panama Canal negotiations "reflect a surprisingly dangerous state of mind."

Tapes of the news conference were broadcast on Ford's behalf in Nebraska, where Reagan defeated Ford last Tuesday.

Besides his meeting with Meany, Carter was scheduled to be back in Maryland today, along with California Gov. Edmund "Jerry" Brown Jr., his chief opponent in Tuesday's Maryland Democratic primary.

For the most part, Brown on Thursday found receptive ears for his platform of full employment, conservation of natural resources and "planetary realism" in the nation's foreign policy.

Brown announced that he'll stage a write-in effort in Oregon's May 25th primary. He had previously planned campaigns in California and Nevada as well as Maryland.

The late-starting presidential hopeful was buoyed by results of a Baltimore Sun poll published Thursday showing him trailing Carter by 1 percentage point among registered Maryland Democrats.

"If I can virtually move into the lead in Maryland in two weeks, why can't I take the lead nationwide in two months," Brown said.

In other Thursday politicking:

—The Washington Post said its national voter survey shows Carter with a large lead over both Ford and Reagan. The newspaper said today that its interviewers discovered Carter pulls votes from many voters who did not describe themselves as Democrats.

Matched against Carter, both Republicans showed support from about one-third of the respondents, the Post said.

—A telephone poll by Udall's staff showed Carter leads Udall by a 2-1 margin in Michigan. Udall spokesman Richard Stout said the poll is "consistent with what happened in Wisconsin, where polls showed Carter with a 2-1 margin that we were able to cut." Udall came in a close second in Wisconsin.

—Wallace, declaring he still is "a viable candidate," said in Louisville that he's glad crossover voting isn't allowed in Kentucky because "this will keep voters from crossing over and voting for Ronald Reagan."

He told Kentucky audiences he was second in the number of popular votes he has received and said the media has ignored that fact.

He also accused Carter of waffling on the issues.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell again today, continuing their decline on Thursday in concern over higher interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down more than two points after opening trades and declining issues led those advancing by almost 2-1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said a rise in short-term interest rates this week has left the stock market edgy. Yields on bonds moved up late Thursday as the Federal Reserve Board reported another weekly jump in the size of the nation's money supply.

And at the start of trading today, Citibank in New York said it was raising its prime lending rate from 6½ per cent to 6¾ per cent.

U.S. Steel was off ¼ at 83½ in early trading today. General Electric was down ½ to 51½, and Mobil Oil was ½ lower at 58.

On Thursday, the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 4.57 to 1,001.10.

Committee To Probe JFK Slaying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA and FBI lied to the Warren Commission about the assassination of President Kennedy, a Senate intelligence committee member said today. The senator also suggested "we pursue some hot leads" to answer for certain who killed Kennedy.

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., a member of the panel's subcommittee investigating the assassination, said "there is no question in my mind" that the two intelligence agencies lied to the commission which conducted the government's first, massive probe of Kennedy's death.

Schweiker said he has found no new evidence about who killed Kennedy but declared: "If we pursue some hot leads, we may well answer that question." Schweiker refused to elaborate on what he meant by "hot leads."

Schweiker made his statements on the CBS-TV "Morning News."

He said the subcommittee has turned up "significant new material about defects and deficiencies in the investigation" of the assassination, noting — as he has before — the CIA's failure to inform the Warren Commission of its schemes against Cuba's Fidel Castro and the FBI's destruction of a note by Lee Harvey Oswald, whom the commission named as Kennedy's sole assassin.

Schweiker and Sen. Gary Hart, D-

Colo., are the only members of the subcommittee, which investigated the "performance or non-performance" of the intelligence agencies during the initial probe of the assassination. Hart has said he has seen no evidence to discredit the Warren Commission's report that Oswald acted alone in killing Kennedy.

But Schweiker said today he disagrees. He said the deficiencies in the original investigation invalidate the Warren Commission's conclusion. Schweiker said he believes the key to Kennedy's slaying lies in Oswald's relationships with both pro and anti-Castro factions.

Schweiker said some of the deficiencies by the CIA and FBI were "deliberate."

Schweiker and Hart are expected to deliver a written report to the intelligence committee by the end of the month. The full committee must approve the report before it is made public.

The question of why Oswald killed Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963, in Dallas, Tex., will be one of the first questions to face a proposed new Senate committee that would watch over the workings of U.S. intelligence agencies.

The Senate intelligence committee voted Thursday to recommend that the proposed new permanent, panel

Battle Royal Seen Over Budget Ceiling

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford and Congress apparently will spend the summer at each other's throats in what could be an historic confrontation over the federal budget.

Acting under a new budget procedure, Congress has for the first time approved its own federal budget. In the past, Congress has worked on a budget submitted by the president.

Under the new procedures, Congress has approved its own spending ceiling of $413.3 billion for fiscal 1977.

But Ford said Thursday he is determined that it will be his budget of $395.8 billion that will regulate government spending and not the congressional budget.

"The Congress should be on notice that it is my intention to hold federal spending to the lower limit I proposed," Ford announced after the House gave Congress' budget ceiling final approval on Thursday. "I will not be a willing partner to the risk of another round of double-digit inflation."

Sen. Frank Moss, D-Utah, had warned when the Senate approved its spending ceiling on Wednesday that if Ford tries to cut the congressional budget figure by veto it would mean "a long summer of futile confrontation between Congress and the White House."

Democratic leaders say Congress' higher spending is the way to keep the nation's economic recovery going, largely by creating an extra one million jobs and continuing Congress' $17 billion tax cut through 1977, rather than granting a $28 million tax cut Ford proposed.

Democrats, including House Budget Committee Chairman Brock Adams, D-Wash., contend it is Congress' tax cut and extra money for federally aided jobs that have started economic recovery, not Ford's efforts to cut federal spending.

The $413.3-billion congressional budget ceiling envisions a $50.8 billion deficit compared to Ford's $44.6 billion.

The essential differences in Ford's and Congress' budget approaches to economic recovery rest on taxes and jobs.

Congress' $17 billion tax cut is focused on low- and middle-income Americans and assumes they will spend the money and stimulate the economy. Congress also wants to spend some $6 billion to create a million new federally aided jobs.

Congress' economists say that will cut unemployment to 6 per cent by the end of 1977, compared to 7 per cent under Ford's budget proposal.

Ford's budget would grant an additional $11 billion in tax cuts to middle-income taxpayers and corporations.

conduct an investigation into the never officially-answered question.

Creation of the new, permanent committee itself remains in doubt.

A compromise measure to create the new panel ran into some unexpected trouble Thursday when members of the Armed Services Committee, which currently monitors the CIA and other spy agencies, raised the possibility of a filibuster.

Majority Leader Mike Mansfield immediately filed a petition to invoke the Senate's debate-ending cloture rule.

pected the contractor to begin July 1 and to be finished with the offices on Aug. 1 and with the gym by Aug. 15.

Also speaking at the meeting was a representative from Town and Country Commercial Driver Education who presented a program whereby the school district could "farm out" its driving education program along with all the insurance, car, gasoline and maintenance problems.

The board approved the program on a one-year contract. It will cost $55 per pupil with the state reimbursing the school district $50 per pupil. The contract between the school and the company contains a clause whereby the price would increase if gasoline should go beyond 55 cents per gallon.

Jacobs said one of the main objectives which had been raised was the scheduling of staff members who had formerly taught driver education. He said he felt this program would relieve those staff members to have other duties.

Since the program will not begin until September, the board took action to renew the insurance policy on the driver education car for the summer. The summer driver education program was also approved with three staff members being paid on an hourly basis to teach the classes. The driver education fee for both the summer and the 1976-77 school year was also set at $5.

Resignations were accepted from the following staff members: Lynn Philbin, high school English; Dawn Gentile, junior high music; Eileen Shaul, Atwater Elementary; Minnie Steinhauer, teacher at South Court Elementary, and Roy Wolford, part-time custodian, advised the board of their intentions to retire. Their resignations were also accepted.

The following staff members resigned from the indicated extra-curricular assignments: Carol Parker, student council; Mary Burke, freshman GAA; Lynn Kraus, high school SOS; Karen Rafeld, eighth grade GAA; Dolores Julian, art club and Janet Martin, Math club. The art club and the math club were not continued due to the lack of student interest.

Jerri Rapp was employed as advisor for the freshman GAA.

The board granted a continuing contract to Mrs. Kraus and approved the extra-curricular assignment of stage band to Clifford Kerns. One non-certificated employer's salary was changed since it had been incorrectly reported at the time of the staff assignments. Linda Doyle's contract was increased from seven tenths to full time effective at the beginning of the school year. She is the speech-hearing therapist.

Four staff members were granted permission to attend professional meetings. The board also approved the list of graduates for commencement providing they meet all the requirements.

A foreign language trip was approved for April 7-16, 1977. Mrs. Winifred Brengle, Mrs. Paula Woodward and Mrs. Carol Mader will be the sponsors of the trip.

Approval was also given for the school accident insurance policy with the Hummel and Plum agency. Building and contents insurance rates and values were presented to the board.

Extended service for four guidance counselors was approved along with the summer school program to be instituted as needed. The board okayed the early dismissal of school on June 4. Elementary students will be released 2:45 p.m.

Textbooks were adopted for eighth and ninth grade industrial arts classes. The adoptions made at the meeting completed all the secondary textbook adoptions needed for the coming school year.

In final action during the evening, the board approved two investments and gave the approval for the senior class to make a donation to the YMCA building fund.

A Page Of Opinion

Encouraging The Vote

There is some expectation of a record turnout of voters this year. But the vote will still fall short of the total in many countries.

In Italy, 93 per cent of the citizens customarily vote; in West Germany, 88 per cent; in Britain, 77 per cent and in Japan, 74 per cent. This is regarded by many as uncomplimentary to Americans, who are lucky in some elections to bring 50 per cent to the polls. So get-out-the-vote enthusiasts try harder each election year.

Others figure that massive efforts to get everybody to vote run the risk of diluting the quality of the nation's political processes. Some citizens simply are not interested, do not inform themselves on the issues or the personalities, and it is no boost to the quality of government to urge them to the polls.

In a close race the uninformed vote might decide the outcome.

The voter registration drives by both parties have become a standard fixture, but what effect they have on the eventual outcome has never been clearly defined.

A Keepsake

By JIM BISHOP

The story of Fanny Schulein wasn't meant to end. She died five or more years ago in Los Angeles, an obscure old lady with a comical German accent. Two weeks ago in Charlotte, N.C., a woman stepped out of a crowd and handed a small black book to me. "From Fanny," she said.

It's a Hebrew book of prayer. Inside the covers are pasted photos of a white-haired woman squinting in the sun as she does needlework on a spread. There are others of a younger woman smiling, with the name "Bertha." A few words are clipped from German telegrams.

The woman disappeared. The book, I surmise, is a keepsake for me. Who and what was Fanny Schulein? A city editor asked me to speak to her in a reception room in 1936.

She was stout. The brown eyes expanded behind thick lenses. There was a wart on her chin. The hair was mousy and straight. The lips seemed to be in motion even when they were closed.

The German accent was heavy. When she spoke fast, it was indecipherable. She had been a screen writer in Berlin. The Schuleins owned linen shops in Nuremberg. The Nazis were after her.

I asked how the newspaper could help. She lowered her head. "The Nazis," she said. Tears started, staggered and stopped on her cheeks. There was no story. Millions of Jews were fleeing Germany.

She returned. Again. And again. If I was busy, Fanny waited. If not, we went to lunch. My wife invited her to our house. The women seemed to understand each other without much conversation.

She showed us photographs from home. They were alike. Her mother and her sister Bertha sat on a small porch. Between them was a small table. On the cloth was an apple. "If everything is good," Fanny said, "the apple is red. If it is bad, no apple."

Mrs. B. and I began to ask each month about the apple. It was there. Miss Schulein did not realize it, but she was Adolf Hitler's ideal victim. He could devise the deaths of almost 6 million Jews, and many would be gassed quickly, but Fanny would be dying for 25 years.

She died when the bell rang. She died every morning at the mailbox. She died when she thought of her father's early death. She died with remorse when she thought of how she had fled Germany, and left her mother and Bertha in Nuremberg.

No American screen company would employ Fanny. She could not think in English, and she was too hysterical to work in German. When she laughed, she laughed too hard. When she came to our house, she spent most of her time with our new baby, Virginia Lee.

Immigration said she had overstayed her visitor's permit. Fanny didn't tell me. She would have to go back. In the Hotel Edison, she tried to jump from a bathroom window. She was a heavy woman. She fell backward, her shoes still on the window sill.

The police told me she had "Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bishop" in her purse as next of kin. She was in the prison ward at Bellevue. I told Dr. Baumann that this was no suicidal nut. He listened. The doctor sent her home.

Fanny disappeared. She went to Detroit, thence to Windsor, Ontario, and returned somehow as a legal immigrant. I demanded to know why she didn't tell me about the problem. My wife asked why I was shouting.

In September, 1938, a photo arrived without the apple. Fanny screamed. She fell and broke her glasses. She refused sedation. She was impossible to comfort, impossible to understand. In November, the telegram arrived: Bertha and mother were dead.

A Nuremberg neighbor wrote that the U.S. had permitted them to commit suicide. They had been neat. They inventoried every possession; they wrote suicide notes, slating no one; they dressed their best, sat in the kitchen and turned on the gas.

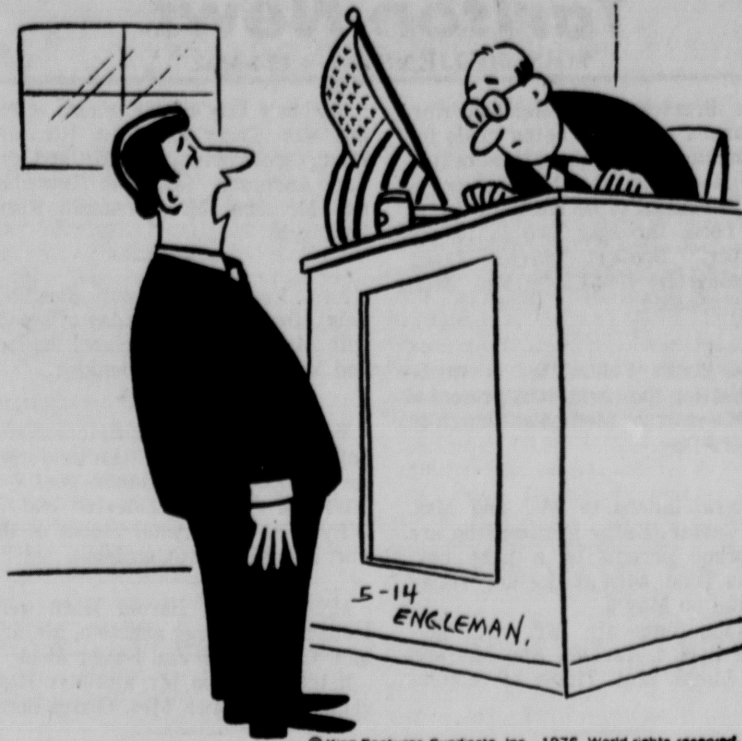

It was then that Fanny Schulein bought the black Hebrew prayer book. She said prayers for the dead, but she too was dead. She went to Hollywood and became a baby sitter. At premieres, she was buried in the crowds outside the klieg lights. Now and then a letter arrived. She was getting old. Hitler died in 1945; Fanny outlived him 25 years. Or did she?

It's an old story, as I said, but it seems destined never to end. A few weeks ago I addressed the Friends of the Library at Charlotte. Outside, in the soft night air, neighbors said goodnight. A woman stepped out of the crowd.

"From Fanny," she said . . .

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I came down with a kidney stone out of the blue. I had been in perfect health until this happened to me. I am 42. The pain was excruciating until I passed the stone. Now I live in dread that it will happen again.

Mr. H.N., Wash.

Dear Mr. N.:

Anyone who has ever had a kidney stone anywhere in the urinary tract will sympathize with you. The pain is indeed "excruciating."

A kidney stone is composed of one or more chemicals. Calcium, magnesium, phosphates and uric acid may be deposited anywhere in the kidney, the ureter or the bladder.

The ureter is a very fine tube which carries urine from the kidney to the bladder. When this is obstructed by a stone, it becomes distended and painful.

There are a number of possible causes of kidney stones. One of the prime causes is faulty metabolism (breakdown of foods). In people who have gout, the uric acid content of the blood becomes high and uric acid kidney stones may be formed.

A tiny hormone-producing gland lies deep within the thyroid gland. This little parathyroid gland controls the calcium balance in the body.

Infections in the kidneys and the bladder are also common causes of stone formation.

The single experience that you have had underscores the importance of tracking down its cause.

A complete general examination, with a finely detailed blood study and urine analysis, will point to the initial cause. Once the cause is found, preventive treatment can be directed at preventing recurrences.

How can I track down the cause of a peculiar mouth odor that came on during the past few months?

Miss T. A., La.

Dear Miss A.:

Halitosis, or bad breath, can usually be traced to the gums, the teeth, the sinuses and the nasal passages.

If no gross evidence of infection or disease is present in these areas, then the stomach and upper intestinal tract must be considered.

Some types of drugs can also be responsible for an unpleasant odor in the mouth. Some types of herbs, in addition to onions and garlic, should be suspected.

Some chronic diseases or chronic infections of the lungs, such as emphysema and bronchitis, can also be the cause.

It was once brought to my attention that drinking eight glasses of water daily resulted in the disappearance of bad breath in those people who had no other cause for halitosis. This should be tried unless your doctor feels that, for some reason, this large amount of fluid is not good for you.

Some 3,500,000 people are disabled by arthritis, including 702 right here in Pickaway County. It doesn't have to happen. Find out about proper care from the local chapter of The Arthritis Foundation, Box 486, Circleville, Ohio 43113.

Encouraging The Vote

There is some expectation of a record turnout of voters this year. But the vote will still fall short of the total in many countries.

In Italy, 93 per cent of the citizens customarily vote; in West Germany, 88 per cent; in Britain, 77 per cent and in Japan, 74 per cent. This is regarded by many as uncomplimentary to Americans, who are lucky in some elections to bring 50 per cent to the polls. So get-out-the-vote enthusiasts try harder each election year.

Others figure that massive efforts to get everybody to vote run the risk of diluting the quality of the nation's political processes. Some citizens simply are not interested, do not inform themselves on the issues or the personalities, and it is no boost to the quality of government to urge them to the polls.

In a close race the uninformed vote might decide the outcome.

The voter registration drives by both parties have become a standard fixture, but what effect they have on the eventual outcome has never been clearly defined.

A Keepsake

By JIM BISHOP

The story of Fanny Schulein wasn't meant to end. She died five or more years ago in Los Angeles, an obscure old lady with a comical German accent. Two weeks ago in Charlotte, N.C., a woman stepped out of a crowd and handed a small black book to me. "From Fanny," she said.

It's a Hebrew book of prayer. Inside the covers are pasted photos of a white-haired woman squinting in the sun as she does needlework on a spread. There are others of a younger woman smiling, with the name "Bertha." A few words are clipped from German telegrams.

The woman disappeared. The book, I surmise, is a keepsake for me. Who and what was Fanny Schulein? A city editor asked me to speak to her in a reception room in 1936.

She was stout. The brown eyes expanded behind thick lenses. There was a wart on her chin. The hair was mousy and straight. The lips seemed to be in motion even when they were closed.

The German accent was heavy. When she spoke fast, it was indecipherable. She had been a screen writer in Berlin. The Schuleins owned linen shops in Nuremberg. The Nazis were after her.

I asked how the newspaper could help. She lowered her head. "The Nazis," she said. Tears started, staggered and stopped on her cheeks. There was no story. Millions of Jews were fleeing Germany.

She returned. Again. And again. If I was busy, Fanny waited. If not, we went to lunch. My wife invited her to our house. The women seemed to understand each other without much conversation.

She showed us photographs from home. They were alike. Her mother and her sister Bertha sat on a small porch. Between them was a small table. On the cloth was an apple. "If everything is good," Fanny said, "the apple is green. If it is bad, no apple."

Mrs. B. and I began to ask each month about the apple. It was there. Miss Schulein did not realize it, but she was Adolf Hitler's ideal victim. He could devise the deaths of almost 6 million Jews, and many would be gassed quickly, but Fanny would be dying for 25 years.

She died when the bell rang. She died every morning at the mailbox. She died when she thought of her father's early death. She died with remorse when she thought of how she had fled Germany, and left her mother and Bertha in Nuremberg.

No American screen company would employ Fanny. She could not think in English, and she was too hysterical to work in German. When she laughed, she laughed too hard. When she came to our house, she spent most of her time with our new baby, Virginia Lee.

Immigration said she had overstayed her visitor's permit. Fanny didn't tell me. She would have to go back. In the Hotel Edison, she tried to jump from a bathroom window. She was a heavy woman. She fell backward, her shoes still on the window sill.

The police told me she had "Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bishop" in her purse as next of kin. She was in the prison ward at Bellevue. I told Dr. Baumann that this was no suicidal nut. He listened. The doctor sent her home.

Fanny disappeared. She went to Detroit, thence to Windsor, Ontario, and returned somehow as a legal immigrant. I demanded to know why she didn't tell me about the problem. My wife asked why I was shouting.

In September, 1938, a photo arrived without the apple. Fanny screamed. She fell and broke her glasses. She refused sedation. She was impossible to comfort, impossible to understand. In November, the telegram arrived: Bertha and mother were dead.

A Nuremberg neighbor wrote that the U.S. had permitted them to commit suicide. They had been neat. They inventoried every possession; they wrote suicide notes blaming no one; they dressed their best, sat in the kitchen and turned on the gas.

It was then that Fanny Schulein bought the black Hebrew prayer book. She said prayers for the dead, but she too was dead. She went to Hollywood and became a baby sitter. At premieres, she was buried in the crowds outside the klieg lights. Now and then a letter arrived. She was getting old. Hitler died in 1945; Fanny outlived him 25 years. Or did she?

It's an old story, as I said, but it seems destined never to end. A few weeks ago I addressed the Friends of the Library at Charlotte. Outside, in the soft night air, neighbors said goodnight. A woman stepped out of the crowd.

"From Fanny," she said...

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I came down with a kidney stone out of the blue. I had been in perfect health until this happened to me. I am 42. The pain was excruciating until I passed the stone. Now I live in dread that it will happen again.

Mr. H.N., Wash.

Dear Mr. N.: Anyone who has ever had a kidney stone anywhere in the urinary tract will sympathize with you. The pain is indeed "excruciating."

A kidney stone is composed of one or more chemicals. Calcium, magnesium, phosphates and uric acid may be deposited anywhere in the kidney, the ureter or the bladder.

The ureter is a very fine tube which carries urine from the kidney to the bladder. When this is obstructed by a stone, it becomes distended and painful.

There are a number of possible causes of kidney stones. One of the prime causes is faulty metabolism (breakdown of foods). In people who have gout, the uric acid content of the blood becomes high and uric acid kidney stones may be formed.

A tiny hormone-producing gland lies deep within the thyroid gland. This little parathyroid gland controls the calcium balance in the body.

Infections in the kidneys and the bladder are also common causes of stone formation.

The single experience that you have had underscores the importance of tracking down its cause.

A complete general examination, with a finely detailed blood study and urine analysis, will point to the initial cause. Once the cause is found, preventive treatment can be directed at preventing recurrences.

How can I track down the cause of a peculiar mouth odor that came on during the past few months?

Miss T. A., La.

Dear Miss A.: Halitosis, or bad breath, can usually be traced to the gums, the teeth, the sinuses and the nasal passages.

If no gross evidence of infection or disease is present in these areas, then the stomach and upper intestinal tract must be considered.

Some types of drugs can also be responsible for an unpleasant odor in the mouth. Some types of herbs, in addition to onions and garlic, should be suspected.

Some chronic diseases or chronic infections of the lungs, such as emphysema and bronchitis, can also be the cause.

It was once brought to my attention that drinking eight glasses of water daily resulted in the disappearance of bad breath in those people who had no other cause for halitosis. This should be tried unless your doctor feels that, for some reason, this large amount of fluid is not good for you.

Some 3,500,000 people are disabled by arthritis, including 702 right here in Pickaway County. It doesn't have to happen. Find out about proper care from the local chapter of The Arthritis Foundation, Box 486, Circleville, Ohio 43113.

Business World

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When a divorced woman goes to a bank in search of credit she would be wise to bring along a copy of the court order stipulating the size and terms of the alimony she receives.

Who says so? The American Bankers Association, which has just completed a statement on some of the new credit conditions introduced recently because of laws, social pressures, and changes in banker attitudes.

The new conditions, some of them relatively minor in themselves, add up to a significantly new credit world for the 15 million divorced or widowed women, a world that many of them still might not understand.

One of the biggest changes is that regular payments awarded to a woman in a divorce action can be used to demonstrate creditworthiness. Before last October, most creditors automatically discounted its importance.

A provision in the Equal Credit Opportunity Act changed that. Creditors now must consider alimony, child support and maintenance payments in assessing a woman's ability to effectively handle credit.

And then, as there is in most matters matrimonial, there is the other side of the story.

The woman is liable for debts taken on jointly with the husband, whether she is divorced or widowed, although she is not liable, of course, for debts the man took on individually.

"If your ex-husband's bad credit history damages your chances of getting credit, you should be prepared to present the creditor reasons why that should not reflect on your personal willingness or ability to pay," the ABA says.

Perhaps it suggests your husband had personal habits that kept your family over its head in debt, or maybe was laid off or injured and couldn't work.

"Proof of this type of situation may help convince your creditor that you were not responsible for the black marks on your credit history," the ABA says, summarizing with this interpretation:

Vacancy Measure On State Ballot

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A vacancy in the office of lieutenant governor would not be filled by gubernatorial appointment under the language of Issue 5, a proposed constitutional amendment on Ohio's June 8 primary election ballot.

Issue 5 is one of six proposals on the ballot proposed by the Constitutional Revision Commission, a group of citizens and lawmakers who work to update Ohio's 125-year-old constitution.

It is one of the proposals usually referred to as "housekeeping amendments." Such amendments make no major change in Ohio law, and their effects would likely never be noticed by the average Ohioan.

But, they do remove excess, obsolete or inconsistent language from the constitution, making it easier to understand and apply.

Since Ohio's constitution can never be changed without the people's approval, Issue 5 and the other housekeeping amendments must be voted upon. That will happen June 8.

Issue 5 would repeal language saying that the governor shall fill by appointment vacancies in state offices "other than that of a member of the General Assembly or of the governor."

Other language provides for filling court vacancies. A separate clause covers gubernatorial appointments to fill vacancies of auditor, treasurer, secretary of state or attorney general.

So, the provision actually applies only to the lieutenant governor. But, why wouldn't the office of lieutenant governor be included in the list with the auditor, treasurer and the others?

The CRC said the governor's authority to fill the lieutenant governor's vacancy was unclear and "not entirely consistent" with the other language. The commission added that there was no real reason to fill a lieutenant governor's vacancy before the next general election.

The commission decided that the inconsistency should be removed. So, they proposed the language be removed and that the office be allowed to remain vacant.

The proposal also would require that municipal and county, township and school elective offices shall be "an even number of years not exceeding four" as may be prescribed by the legislature. Constitution language does not now specify maximum terms or even number of years.

Veterans Questions Answered

EDITOR'S NOTE: Each week the Circleville Herald will publish a series of Questions and Answers of interest to veterans. These questions and answers are some of the many presented to James P. Shea, Pickaway County Veterans Service Officer, Any veteran desiring further information concerning his Veterans Administration benefits should contact the Veterans Service Office at 219 South Court Street.

(Q.) What are the chances of a veteran, over 65 getting Pension Benefits from the VA?

(A.) At the age of 65 the Veterans Administration concedes that all veterans are totally and permanently disabled... however, that is only one half of the requirement of actually receiving benefits. A veteran must also be within certain income limitations depending on whether he is single or has dependents.

(Q.) I am a Vietnam veteran. I would like to get a Business Loan under the GI bill, is this possible?

(A.) I am sorry, but it is not possible for a Vietnam veteran to secure a GI loan for business purposes. He can only secure a GI loan for a home.

(Q.) I am a World War II veteran. It seems that somehow in the years since I was in service, that I have lost my discharge papers. Can I secure another discharge certificate?

(A.) You most certainly can, and I advise you to do so at once. If you should precede your wife in death, she will need your discharge to file for VA benefits to which she will be entitled. It would be advisable for all veterans to make a careful check to determine if they still have their discharge papers from WWI or WWII, or their DD 214 Report of Separation from the Korean Conflict to the current time. If not, application for another one should be made at once.

(Q.) I was treated for a disability while in service in WWII. Is it too late to file a claim for Service Connection for this disability?

(A.) No, it definitely is not too late. However, it has been almost 30 some odd years since WWII, and filing a claim at this time will be difficult. However, I advise you to file a claim at once. Lets not wait any longer.

(Q.) The interest rate on GI loans seem to change so much, I can't keep up with it. What is the interest rate at the present time?

(A.) At the present time, the interest rate on a GI loan is 8 1/2 per cent.

Vacancy Measure On State Ballot

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A vacancy in the office of lieutenant governor would not be filled by gubernatorial appointment under the language of Issue 5, a proposed constitutional amendment on Ohio's June 8 primary election ballot.

Issue 5 is one of six proposals on the ballot proposed by the Constitutional Revision Commission, a group of citizens and lawmakers who work to update Ohio's 125-year-old constitution.

It is one of the proposals usually referred to as "housekeeping amendments." Such amendments make no major change in Ohio law, and their effects would likely never be noticed by the average Ohioan.

But, they do remove excess, obsolete or inconsistent language from the constitution, making it easier to understand and apply.

Since Ohio's constitution can never be changed without the people's approval, Issue 5 and the other housekeeping amendments must be voted upon. That will happen June 8.

Issue 5 would repeal language saying that the governor shall fill by appointment vacancies in state offices "other than that of a member of the General Assembly or of the governor."

Other language provides for filling court vacancies. A separate clause covers gubernatorial appointments to fill vacancies of auditor, treasurer, secretary of state or attorney general.

So, the provision actually applies only to the lieutenant governor. But, why wouldn't the office of lieutenant governor be included in the list with the auditor, treasurer and the others?

The CRC said the governor's authority to fill the lieutenant governor's vacancy was unclear and "not entirely consistent" with the other language. The commission added that there was no real reason to fill a lieutenant governor's vacancy before the next general election.

The commission decided that the inconsistency should be removed. So, they proposed the language be removed and that the office be allowed to remain vacant.

The proposal also would require that municipal and county, township and school elective offices shall be "an even number of years not exceeding four" as may be prescribed by the legislature. Constitution language does not now specify maximum terms or even number of years.

Veterans Questions Answered

EDITOR'S NOTE: Each week the Circleville Herald will publish a series of Questions and Answers of interest to veterans. These questions and answers are some of the many presented to James P. Shea, Pickaway County Veterans Service Officer. Any veteran desiring further information concerning his Veterans Administration benefits should contact the Veterans Service Office at 219 South Court Street.

(Q.) What are the chances of a veteran, over 65 getting Pension Benefits from the VA?

(A.) At the age of 65 the Veterans Administration concedes that all veterans are totally and permanently disabled... however, that is only one half of the requirement of actually receiving benefits. A veteran must also be within certain income limitations depending on whether he is single or has dependents.

(Q.) I am a Vietnam veteran. I would like to get a Business Loan under the GI bill, is this possible?

(A.) I am sorry, but it is not possible for a Vietnam veteran to secure a GI loan for business purposes. He can only secure a GI loan for a home.

(Q.) I am a World War II veteran. It seems that somehow in the years since I was in service, that I have lost my discharge papers. Can I secure another discharge certificate?

(A.) You most certainly can, and I advise you to do so at once. If you should precede your wife in death, she will need your discharge to file for VA benefits to which she will be entitled. It would be advisable for all veterans to make a careful check to determine if they still have their discharge papers from WWI or WWII, or their DD 214 Report of Separation from the Korean Conflict to the current time. If not, application for another one should be made at once.

(Q.) I was treated for a disability while in service in WWII. Is it too late to file a claim for Service Connection for this disability?

(A.) No, it definitely is not too late. However, it has been almost 30 some odd years since WWII, and filing a claim at this time will be difficult. However, I advise you to file a claim at once. Let's not wait any longer.

(Q.) The interest rate on GI loans seem to change so much, I can't keep up with it. What is the interest rate at the present time?

(A.) At the present time, the interest rate on a GI loan is 8 1/2 per cent.

Pickaway County Extension Homemakers Sponsor Tour

Pickaway County Extension Homemakers sponsored a bus tour to the West Liberty and Piqua Areas recently.

At West Liberty they toured Castle Piatt Mac-A-Cheek, a model of a Norman French Chateau built in 1964 by General Abram Saunders Piatt, and Mac-O-Chee, a model of a Flemish Castle, built in 1879 by Colonel Donn Piatt, a brother of Abram Piatt. Both castles are now owned by William M. and J. J. Piatt, great-grandsons of Abram Piatt.

They visited the C. S. Smuckers Arts and Artifice operated by Isabel and Christine Smucker who gave demonstrations on washing, using leaves, flowers, nuts hulls, insects and other nature products to dye natural fibers. They also demonstrated carding, spinning and weaving. The group also visited their gift shop. The women lunched at Danolee's Foods in West Liberty.

At the Piqua Historical Area the John Johnston Farm was visited. Mr. Johnston, federal Indian agent for Western Ohio from 1812 to 1830, bought the original 235 acre farm in 1804 - 1805 for $1353 when the proprietor defaulted payment of the federal land fee. He called the farm his "Upper Pickaway Farm." He built a log house and barn in 1808. The present brick house was built 1810 - 1815. The brick house and barn have been restored. The spring house, fruit kiln and cider house have been reconstructed. As a pioneer in agricultural development in Western Ohio, Johnston centered his farm operations around fruit and pork production and employed the latest mechanical devices. His farm products were shipped directly to Cincinnati on the Miami and Erie Canal, which went along the side of his farm.

Members and guests on the tour were: Helen Abney, Emily Beery, Connie Chandler, Fran Chelikowsky, Mary Clark, Dot Coates, Pearle Cochenour, Charlotte Cupp, Dee Dawson, Sandy Dixon, Priscilla Downing, Vera Downs, Marvine Dudleson, Yetive Dudleson, Magdalene Fee, Susan Fetherolf, Anne Fissell.

Edmund Pendleton: Early Father Of U.S. Liberty

EDITOR'S NOTE—On May 15, 1776, the first declaration of American independence was proclaimed. The unlikely author of that historic document was Edmund Pendleton.

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

The man who pointed America toward the radical extremes of independence and the equality of man was a conservative of the old school, Squire Edmund Pendleton of Virginia. Pendleton was the recognized leader of Virginia conservatives, yet he presided over the convention in Williamsburg that replaced more than a century and a half of colonial administration with total self-government.

And he authored the resolution adopted 200 years ago this week which ultimately led to the Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights and the Constitution.

Pendleton was such a cautious man

Radiation Recipients Sought

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Medical authorities have launched a massive search for 10,000 persons in the greater Pittsburgh area who were exposed to possibly cancer-causing radiation treatments more than 20 years ago.

In announcing the search at a news conference Wednesday, officials said the group covers persons who underwent radiation treatments to shrink tonsils, adenoids and the thymus gland. Most of them would now be between 25 and 40 years old.

"Out of this 10,000, we can predict that about 7 per cent are probably harboring a thyroid cancer," said Dr. Robert G. Carroll, assistant professor of radiology at the University of Pittsburgh.

Therapeutic irradiation was widely accepted between 1930 and 1950 as medically safe and effective, Carroll said. But recent scientific evidence suggests those who received such treatment run a higher than normal risk of developing thyroid cancer.

The 10,000 figure represents the approximate number of patients known to have been treated in Allegheny County.

"We want to emphasize that thyroid cancer is the slowest growing and most easily cured cancer," said Carroll. "It takes between 10 and 30 years to grow and the cure rate while it is still in the neck is about 95 per cent."

Carroll said the treatments under question should not be confused with diagnostic X-rays, which do not pose risks of thyroid abnormality.

The search was launched by the 100-member Hospital Council of Western Pennsylvania and the Allegheny County Medical Society. For the moment, it will center in the county.

Rubber Talks Continue

CLEVELAND (AP) — A Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., spokesman said experts on a fringe benefit package were being brought in today as negotiators seek to make some headway in talks with the striking United Rubber Workers.

There has been little indication of progress toward breaking a deadlock in the 24-day-old URW strike against the Big Four rubber firms.

Negotiations, which recessed after a brief session Thursday, were to resume at 10 a.m. today.

A Firestone spokesman said the Thursday session snagged over how benefit programs would be administered, and the experts were being brought in to clarify the issues.

Meanwhile, the URW's contract with a fifth major producer, General Tire & Rubber Co., expires Saturday. Separate talks with General Tire representatives were being conducted in Canton amid reports that agreement might be reached prior to the deadline.

that he was nicknamed "Moderation" by his critics. But it was this staid conservative who recognized independence as a necessity just as the firebrands of revolution were beginning to cool.

Pendleton was born on Virginia's frontier in an age of growth and excitement, but he had much to overcome. Four months before his birth on Sept. 9, 1721, his father died.

His mother, left with seven children, soon married another frontier planter, and Edmund grew up at hard farm labor.

While the boy toiled by day, he studied by night, although he had only two years of formal education. Like most boys of his class from families too large and too poor to support them, Pendleton was apprenticed at the age of 14, to Col. Benjamin Moore, the clerk of court for Caroline County.

In this practical school of experience Pendleton learned of law and government, processing wills, deeds, bonds and all manner of court pleadings. He gained such a reputation for industry and efficiency that by 16 he was clerk of the vestry of St. Mary's Parish. Then he became clerk of the county court.

But clerking wasn't good enough for the ambitious youth. He wanted to be a lawyer, or maybe even a judge. So he began studying law from the few books available at the courthouse.

Finding himself frustrated by the Latin phrases, he enrolled in a Latin school for three months until he knew enough to continue on his own. By the time he passed the bar, it was said, "few were able to translate Latin more correctly."

At the age 21 he was licensed to practice in the colony's lower courts and began building a practice and a comfortable life. Then his young wife of less than a year died delivering a stillborn child. He would remarry in a matter of months, there would be no other children.

To escape his grief, Pendleton threw himself into his work, confirming a lifelong pattern. A colleague in government once said "labour was his delight."

Still in his 20s, he became one of the foremost lawyers in the territory and was licensed to practice in the general court, the colony's highest. Like most ambitious men of the time, Pendleton also invested in land, building up a profitable plantation and speculating in the west.

The young lawyer-planter accepted all the civic responsibilities which went with his new station. He was a devoted member of the established Anglican Church and served as vestryman.

At 30, Pendleton was made county justice, and the next year he was elected to the Virginia House of Burgesses. He never lost an election and remained a member of the colonial legislature until it was replaced by a new government of his own making.

As member of a committee to protest the hard-money demands of London merchants, Pendleton helped voice one of the earliest defenses of colonial rights. While the committee acknowledged American dependence, it insisted this was "not the independence of a people subjugated by the arms of conqueror, but of sons sent out to explore and settle a new world, for the mutual benefit of themselves and their common parent."

Pendleton often found himself involved in writing protests, not from any love of dissent, but because he could be counted on to keep things within reasonable bounds.

His style was sober and intellectual. He opposed those who wanted to deter a stamp tax for the colonies with violence, and he disapproved of the inflammatory resolves promoted by Patrick Henry's oratory. But he insisted on American rights.

Pendleton also opposed Henry when an appeal to "liberty or death" led Virginia to mobilize two regiments of militia. Why, he asked should Virginia affront England with a show of force when the purpose of real defense already was being served by men arming and drilling all over the colony on a less formal basis?

And why the haste to confront the world's mightiest empire without first lining up foreign allies?

Although he lost the debate to Henry, Pendleton accepted his duty and led the committee which was to put Virginia in a state of defense.

But Pendleton was to have the last word in the summer of 1776 when Virginia gathered in convention to decide her destiny. Would she claim her independence alone or with the other colonies?

The conservatives breathed relief when Pendleton was elected president. But this time it was Henry who was reluctant, who wanted foreign allies first.

After two days of debate a compromise resolution emerged from the convention. Pendleton, the conservative who had opposed Henry's radicalism, was its author and the first author of a declaration of American independence.

The resolution of May 15, 1776 instructed the Virginia delegates in Congress to propose that the 13 united colonies declare their independence and form a national government.

It also called for a written state constitution and a declaration of rights to spell out and guarantee freedom. Under Pendleton's guidance, these were accomplished.

"When the dispute with Britain began," he recalled later in life, "a redress of grievances, and not a revolution of government was my wish. In this I was firm, but temperate; and whilst I was endeavouring to raise the spirit of the timid to a general united opposition by stating to the uninformed the real merits of the dispute, I opposed and endeavoured to moderate the violent and fiery, who were plunging us into rash measures, and had the happiness to find a majority of all the public bodies confirming my sentiments. Which, I believe, was the corner stone of our success."

NEW YORK (AP) — In church journals, seminaries and scholarly conferences, discussion is mounting about so-called "liberation theology." It has its supporters, but it's also getting some brickbats.

It's the "new fad" of leftwing intellectuals, say critics.

It's as old as the Bible, say defenders, and criticism of it is what's now becoming the fashion among the academic elite.

Basically, "liberation theology" challenges the status quo, demanding changes in behalf of the weak and oppressed. That's what the Biblical prophets and Jesus did, advocates say,

Week Of Classes For Gifted Slated

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A week of classes for gifted Ohio high school students will be held at Ohio State University this summer, Martin W. Essex, superintendent of public instruction announced Thursday.

Enrollment in the Bicentennial School for the Gifted will be limited to 50 juniors nominated by their school superintendents and selected by a review committee, Essex said.

"The objective is to prepare emerging leaders for solving contemporary and future problems by exposing them to new knowledge and experiences," Essex said.

tivists in Latin America, where it is embraced by "Christians for Socialism" groups formed in several countries which attack capitalist regimes as exploitative and unjust.

"We aim at a church in solidarity with the interests and the struggles of the workers," says the Rev. Gonzalo Arroyo, an American Jesuit and leader in the movement, which holds that justice — and authentic Christianity — require socialism.

The thesis has spread to some Christian circles in Europe and Africa, and most recently, has become an issue among some American theologians, some of whom took part late last year in a Detroit conference about it.

"Liberation theology discounts or omits the hard historical lessons," says lay Catholic philosopher Michael Novak of Bayville, N.Y. He says it is "naive about economics" in its "romance with socialism and Marxism."

Disputing him in the weekly National Catholic Reporter, Bishop Gilberto E. Chavez of San Diego says "liberation theology" is not primarily concerned with intellectual theories but real conditions.

He says those conditions include "grinding poverty and institutional violence" against the poor that "cry out for justice."

However, a Catholic priest-sociologist, the Rev. Andrew Greeley of Chicago, says "liberation theology" in the views of its proponents does not mean freedom but state control of every aspect of life.

It spurns traditional freedoms — such as rights of political dissent, free speech, free press and free opinion as "bankrupt liberal democracy" and "bourgeois capitalism," he writes in the Catholic Messenger of Davenport, Iowa.

"Marxism, of which the liberationists are so devoutly fond, never comes to political power without ruthlessly suppressing all opposition," he says. "Under such regimes, one is free, all right, free to do exactly what the government wants you to do."

On the other side, the Rev. Frank X. Riley, a San Ysidro, Calif., priest, argues "liberation theology is mostly Biblical theology" and the core of it will be around as long as crue endures.

Depressing sight, isn't it? And what is it we say when something old, familiar, once-cherished, once-useful has succumbed to the ravages of time? It served its purpose!

Could all the churches in our town someday look like this? They could! Maybe they will . . .

if they have served their purpose . . . if we don't need them anymore!

Even if you haven't been to church recently, I think you'll protest that we DO need our churches. We need the truth they teach — the faith they instill — the hope they inspire — the God-given strength with which they undergird our life.

This is the very point: We ALL need our churches.

And to bring ALL of us to realize and fulfill our need . . . That is their purpose!

Depressing sight, isn't it? And what is it we say when something old, familiar, once-cherished, once-useful has succumbed to the ravages of time? It served its purpose!

Could all the churches in our town someday look like this?

They could!

Maybe they will . . .

if they have served their purpose . . .

if we don't need them anymore!

Even if you haven't been to church recently, I think you'll protest that we DO need our churches. We need the truth they teach — the faith they instill — the hope they inspire — the God-given strength with which they undergird our life.

This is the very point: We ALL need our churches.

And to bring ALL of us to realize and fulfill our need . . .

That is their purpose!

Paper Person Calls For End To Sexism

DEAR ABBY: I am a paperGIRL, and I deliver to approximately 80 households.

My problem is that I am constantly being called a paperBOY, and I hate it. There are a lot of girls who deliver papers, and it's time people realized it.

Our newspaper company had an awards banquet, and the invitation read: "Please wear a shirt and tie." Well, I turned down the invitation. When my adviser asked me why I didn't attend, I said, "Because I don't have a shirt and tie!"

He said I was silly because if I had been there, I might have been voted paperBOY of the year.

Abby, can you do something about my problem? All of us paperGIRLS will be very grateful.

PALM SPRINGS PAPERGIRL
DEAR PAPERGIRL: If the newspaper is delivered on time the boy or girl doing the job will be called "blessed." (P.S. I'm sending you a shirt and tie for the next awards banquet.)

DEAR ABBY: Our son and his girlfriend, who are both in their early 30s and divorced, live in California about 50 miles apart. They openly admit that they sleep together on weekends to find out if they are compatible for marriage.

They flew here last December to spend the holidays with Dad and me. When we showed them his bedroom for HER and the hideaway bed in the den for HIM, they decided to stay at a motel.

Dad and I were hurt because we see our son only once a year, but we didn't say anything, and off they went.

When our son returned to California, he phoned to tell us that his expenses for the trip, including the motel room, were $748, so we sent him a check but said this was the last time we would pay for a motel room since there was plenty of room at our house.

Do you think we were wrong in refusing to let them sleep together in our home? Even though we knew they had slept together elsewhere, it would have made us very uncomfortable.

SQUARE IN ILLINOIS
DEAR SQUARE: No. When children

(of any age) visit their parents, they should live by the rules of the parents' home. You were far more generous than most parents would have been. Since your son preferred to stay at a motel, HE should have paid for it!

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column about the daughter who is the only one in the family who visits her sometimes senile mother in a convalescent home. (Her sister and brothers can't stand the smell, and they get too depressed seeing old people.)

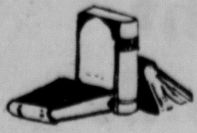

I'll tell you one better than that: My mother is 80, and lives in her own little house, which has no hospital odor. And she's not a bit senile. One of my brothers lives right next door to her, and he stops in to see her maybe once a month for a few minutes.

The other brother lives only 15 minutes away from her, and it's the same thing with him. Neither brother has ever offered to mow her lawn, rake her leaves, or do any painting or repairing for her. Do you know who looks after my mother? My husband—her 60-year-old son-in-law! (My brothers are not yet 50.)

By the way, my brothers run to the altar every week. Not that there's anything wrong with that, but it takes more than prayers to make people good Christians. Right, Abby?

Did you know that you can borrow records free of charge at your Pickaway County District Public Library? New albums are added frequently and the collection runs the gamut from pops to classical and all the areas in between.

Thanks to the "Friends of the Library" organization, the record collection has been increased. During the recent drive organized by that group, many new additions were made to the current collection. The Library is appreciative both to those "Friends" who participated in the effort and to those people who contributed records. Be sure to stop in and see how the library can enrich your musical entertainment.

While you're listening to your favorite music, try reading a good book. That's a winning combination for a relaxing evening.

Pat Conrad scored in the field of non-fiction with "The Water Is Wide." Now he tries his hand at the novel. "The Great Santini" is the story of a family whose Marine officer father is a strict disciplinarian. A son's determination to be his own man provides the reader interest in Mr. Conroy's first attempt at fiction.

If you're not afraid to meet a vampire and "The Exorcist" didn't keep you awake, then be sure to read "Interview With The Vampire" by Anne Rice. It's the chilling story of a present day vampire as he sets out to explore his world of the living dead.

"Wild Grow The Lilies" by Christy Brown is a lusty Irish story. Earthy characters, murder and Irish wit add up to a laugh-out-loud kind of farce.

Pamela Hill's gothics never lack for murder and vengeance. "The Heatherton Heritage" is no exception. Dark secrets and terrible obsessions dominate William Heatherton as he struggles to find peace.

For the reader who prefers a good mystery for bedtime reading, "Ellery Queen's Giants Of Mystery" edited by Ellery Queen is a new anthology of some of the best in the field of mystery writing.

Take an old castle, a restless haunt, and a long-buried secret and mix it with several selfish motives. That's the recipe for an exciting novel of romantic suspense. Call it "King John's Treasure" by Millie Ragosta. "Double Honeymoon" by Evan S.

Connell, Jr. is the story of a May-September romance. Far from the usual older-man-young-woman tale, however, it's the examination of the dilemma posed by two people attracted to each other but with profound differences in their backgrounds and outlooks.

"Betrayal" by Robert D. Morrow seems to offer more fuel for the Warren Commission debate. The author claims to have been involved in CIA projects dating from the Bay of Pigs fiasco to the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

ROTARY SPEAKER — Dick Davis presented Dee Covey to the Circleville Rotary Club Thursday. Ms. Covey, liaison for disaster services to the Girl Scouts, described a mock disaster and showed a film on an airplane crash. The plane was loaded with poisonous snakes from Africa and crashed into a schoolbus and six autos. The girl scouts in the film simulated the numerous wounds and proceeded to take care of the injured. A unit of Girl Scouts in this area is actively engaged in competition and seminars to improve services in advanced first aid in disaster. All Rotarians are urged to attend the next meeting or to attend a make-up meeting in order to make 100 per cent attendance. Individual pictures will be taken and a club banner will be presented to those present.

President Promotes Votes In Kentucky

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — President Ford was scheduled to make two appearances in Kentucky today, on the heels of Republican presidential nomination challenger Ronald Reagan.

Ford campaign officials said the President is scheduled to arrive at Standiford Field here at 4:50 p.m. EDT from Memphis, Tenn. Ford was scheduled for Tennessee appearances earlier today in Johnson City and Memphis.

None of the roughly five hours Ford will spend in Kentucky is slated for actually appearing in public. The two events he will attend involve select groups — persons considered at the least friendly to Ford and at the most enthusiastic.

There is speculation among local officials and campaign sources that Louisville anti-busing forces may attempt to stage a demonstration against the President for what they feel is Ford's failure to take an active role in opposing court-ordered school desegregation busing.

Busing school children has been an emotional — and sometimes violent — issue here since last fall, when about 20,000 of the Louisville-Jefferson County school system's 130,000 pupils were bused under the order of U.S. District Court Judge James F. Gordon.

Ford has publicly stated his opposition to forced busing, but some anti-busing leaders have accused the President of taking a hands-off stand with the courts for political expediency.

The public will not be allowed in the area where Ford will deplane at Standiford Field this afternoon.

Upon arrival, the President will be driven directly to the Kentucky State Fairgrounds, where he is scheduled to appear at a private gathering with key members of his Kentucky campaign staff.

He is also scheduled to make a brief speech there at a larger gathering of campaign workers.

Ford will then travel by motorcade to the Galt House hotel for about an hour of meeting with his national campaign staff.

Taxpayers Sought To Receive Refunds

WASHINGTON (AP) — First the bad news: the IRS is looking for a couple of million Americans. Now the good news: the IRS wants to give them some money.

The Internal Revenue Service says more than two million Americans might be eligible for a cash windfall from the government, but haven't applied for the money under a special tax credit available to taxpayers who earned less than $8,000 in 1975.

The IRS had expected up to three million people to qualify for payments of up to $400 but the service said its figures show that only about one-tenth of that number, or 300,000 individuals, have filed a tax form to receive the money.

A total of $1.5 billion was set aside to pay to those claiming the credit.

The windfall is called the earned income credit and under the provisions of this new tax break individuals could receive income tax refund checks from IRS even if they paid no 1975 federal taxes. Or the credit could be used to reduce any taxes owed.

To receive the credit, an individual must file an income tax return.

"It does surprise us how few people are taking advantage of the credit," an IRS spokesman said.

The IRS is trying to find potentially qualified taxpayers who haven't claimed the credit.

The tax collectors said that by this year's filing deadline the agency had sent form notices to 1.8 million people advising them they might have been eligible to reduce their tax bill by using the credit.

The reasons for the low response rate aren't clear yet, but analysts in the Treasury Department and on Capitol Hill suspect the newness of the credit, a unique wrinkle in the U.S. tax law, is one factor.

To be eligible for the credit, a taxpayer must have earned $8,000 or less in 1975 and have at least one dependent child. If married, a joint return must be filed.

The credit applies only to wages, salaries and other earned income and not, for example, to interest on savings accounts.

The credit amounts to 10 per cent of earned income up to $4,000 minus 10 per cent of earned income between $4,000 and $8,000.

It would work this way. A married person supporting a family of three on $3,300 wouldn't have to pay any taxes, probably wouldn't have had any withheld from his or her paycheck and normally would not have to file a return.

With the earned income credit, the person would receive a government check for $330, but would have to file a return to apply for it.

Eligible taxpayers who haven't filed a return can still do so even though the filing deadline is past. Those who filed but neglected to claim the credit can file an amended tax return.

Adobe Preservation

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona State University researchers are trying to perfect a process called electro-osmosis to help preserve adobe structures.

Their primary concern is treating ruins that have not yet been excavated. The treatment does not change the appearance of the structures.

In a project funded by the National Park Service and directed by Dr. Charles O'Bannon, ASU associate professor of Civil engineering, two graduate students are working on a chemical which, when driven into adobe walls, will stabilize clay into a permanent material.

Kern County, Calif., ranks as third largest agricultural producing area in the United States.

ROTARY SPEAKER — Dick Davis presented Dee Covey to the Circleville Rotary Club Thursday. Ms. Covey, liaison for disaster services to the Girl Scouts, described a mock disaster and showed a film on an airplane crash. The plane was loaded with poisonous snakes from Africa and crashed into a schoolbus and six autos. The girl scouts in the film simulated the numerous wounds and proceeded to take care of the injured. A unit of Girl Scouts in this area is actively engaged in competition and seminars to improve services in advanced first aid in disaster. All Rotarians are urged to attend the next meeting or to attend a make-up meeting in order to make 100 per cent attendance. Individual pictures will be taken and a club banner will be presented to those present.

President Promotes Votes In Kentucky

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — President Ford was scheduled to make two appearances in Kentucky today, on the heels of Republican presidential nomination challenger Ronald Reagan.

Ford campaign officials said the President is scheduled to arrive at Standiford Field here at 4:50 p.m. EDT from Memphis, Tenn. Ford was scheduled for Tennessee appearances earlier today in Johnson City and Memphis.

None of the roughly five hours Ford will spend in Kentucky is slated for actually appearing in public. The two events he will attend involve select groups — persons considered at the least friendly to Ford and at the most enthusiastic.

There is speculation among local officials and campaign sources that Louisville anti-busing forces may attempt to stage a demonstration against the President for what they feel is Ford's failure to take an active role in opposing court-ordered school desegregation busing.

Busing school children has been an emotional — and sometimes violent — issue here since last fall, when about 20,000 of the Louisville-Jefferson County school system's 130,000 pupils were bused under the order of U.S. District Court Judge James F. Gordon.

Ford has publicly stated his opposition to forced busing, but some anti-busing leaders have accused the President of taking a hands-off stand with the courts for political expediency.

The public will not be allowed in the area where Ford will deplane at Standiford Field this afternoon.

Upon arrival, the President will be driven directly to the Kentucky State Fairgrounds, where he is scheduled to appear at a private gathering with key members of his Kentucky campaign staff.

He is also scheduled to make a brief speech there at a larger gathering of campaign workers.

Ford will then travel by motorcade to the Galt House hotel for about an hour of meeting with his national campaign staff.

Taxpayers Sought To Receive Refunds

WASHINGTON (AP) — First the bad news: the IRS is looking for a couple of million Americans. Now the good news: the IRS wants to give them some money.

The Internal Revenue Service says more than two million Americans might be eligible for a cash windfall from the government, but haven't applied for the money under a special tax credit available to taxpayers who earned less than $8,000 in 1975.

The IRS had expected up to three million people to qualify for payments of up to $400 but the service said its figures show that only about one-tenth of that number, or 300,000 individuals, have filed a tax form to receive the money.

A total of $1.5 billion was set aside to pay to those claiming the credit.

The windfall is called the earned income credit and under the provisions of this new tax break individuals could receive income tax refund checks from IRS even if they paid no 1975 federal taxes. Or the credit could be used to reduce any taxes owed.

To receive the credit, an individual must file an income tax return.

"It does surprise us how few people are taking advantage of the credit," an IRS spokesman said.

The IRS is trying to find potentially qualified taxpayers who haven't claimed the credit.

The tax collectors said that by this year's filing deadline the agency had sent form notices to 1.8 million people advising them they might have been eligible to reduce their tax bill by using the credit.

The reasons for the low response rate aren't clear yet, but analysts in the Treasury Department and on Capitol Hill suspect the newness of the credit, a unique wrinkle in the U.S. tax law, is one factor.

To be eligible for the credit, a taxpayer must have earned $8,000 or less in 1975 and have at least one dependent child. If married, a joint return must be filed.

The credit applies only to wages, salaries and other earned income and not, for example, to interest on savings accounts.

The credit amounts to 10 per cent of earned income up to $4,000 minus 10 per cent of earned income between $4,000 and $8,000.

It would work this way. A married person supporting a family of three on $3,300 wouldn't have to pay any taxes, probably wouldn't have had any withheld from his or her paycheck and normally would not have to file a return.

With the earned income credit, the person would receive a government check for $330, but would have to file a return to apply for it.

Eligible taxpayers who haven't filed a return can still do so even though the filing deadline is past. Those who filed but neglected to claim the credit can file an amended tax return.

It is still greetings from Room 9, bed 1 at Berger Hospital but happily I am on the improvement road and may it continue to be so.

Everyone here at Berger is so friendly and helpful and they truly care for the patient's well being, and who can ask for anything more?

There are so many ways in which to sing the praises — the volunteers and volunteers who bring their own special charm and brightness — the hospital employees who sincerely put service and kindness over self and you know, the patients respond to all this by being concerned and caring for one another.

Across the hall from me is Dorothy McGhee whose condition remains quite ill. A former resident of our town she has lived in Washington C. H. for several years.

Liturgical Events Held By St. Joseph

The parish of St. Joseph's Catholic Church held two important liturgical events early this month.

On May 1, the sacrament of Communion was given for the first time to 23 second graders. Fr. Frank Meagher was the celebrant of the Children's Mass held at 11 a.m. on Saturday.

Through a series of preparation classes, the parents had helped prepare their children for this special event. The entire program for this year was under the direction of Mrs. John Raterman.

Children receiving their First Communion were: Carla Ayers, Beth Allison, Pamela Daley, Michelle Davidson, Trent DeBruin, Regina Ebbrecht, Timmy Ferenchik, Julie Fitzgerald, William Geddis, Marsha Goeller, Jean Goode, Mary Howley, Timothy Lemaster, Heather McConnell, Michele McGinnis, Beth Morehart, James Rhoads, Brady Rodenfels, Rebecca Rorick, Barbara Sahr, Greg Scanlan, Patrick Tully, and David Stonerock.

The ladies of St. Joseph's Altar and Rosary Society hosted a reception for all First Communicants, their families, and friends following the mass.

On Sunday May 2, the annual May Crowning was held at 2 p.m. The children from grades one through eight formed a procession from the school building to the church. Each child carried a flower to be presented at the church's altar. Father Frank Meagher and Monsignor Joseph McGlynn led the congregation in the recitation of the rosary.

A court of five eighth grade girls had the honor of assisting in the crowning of Mary's Statue. Laure Kazmierczak carried the crown with Patty Carle, Elizabeth Doritan, Lori Lindsey, and Tracey Dietrich completing the court.

Benediction of the Holy Eucharist was said by Fr. Meagher with the parishioners responding. Mrs. Joseph Carle was the organist for the service.

This annual ceremony is an age old tradition of the Catholic Church to honor Mary, the mother of Jesus Christ. The month of May is considered a special time to remember the beautiful qualities and prestige of this most special lady—truly an inspiration to all women of all time.

A social hour followed the ceremony in the church meeting room. Mrs. Roger Geis and Mrs. Robert Knecht were chairmen.

Farther down the hall is area resident Mary (Mrs. Claude) Crabill who is also very ill. She is in Room 106. The Crabills daughter and son-in-law, Ann and Jerry Stonerock of Florence, S.C., have been here for several days. They planned to begin the drive home on Thursday.

While here they spent time with other friends and relatives among which were Jerry's Mom, Mrs. Hazel Stonerock of Columbus who is planning to move back to Pickaway County and Dick and Bea Young of near Stouts-ville.

Dick and Jerry are "way back when" associates of the local DuPont plant. Dick is also one of Papa Bill's extra special buddies. It was so good to reminisce again with Ann and Jerry. We have lots of good memories.

Also down the hall is Marvie Baby Thompson's Aunt Goldie in Room 119. In Room 110 is Westfall's popular bus driver Sue (Mrs. John) Eitel.

Next door in Room 8 is lovable, affable former County Auditor Marvyn H. Rhoades.

In a tearful departure "roomie" Edna Sadler and I said farewell on Monday. Strange how close a bond can form in just a short time.

Then for a day and night my roommate was Kevelyn Faulk who had a T & A (that's hospital bingo for tonsils and adenoids coming out).

As of late Wednesday afternoon it has been my good fortune for Dr. Moore to assign one of his patients, Christine (Mrs. Leo) Morgan to bed Number 2. All of the youngsters in the area are friends of Christine's because she is one of the wonderful ladies who introduces them to the world of books via the Pickaway County Bookmobile library.

Do me a favor and get a card of cheer in the mail to Mrs. Lula Kimble, University Hospital, Columbus, Ohio. She is a dear friend of mine and the mother of Esta (Mrs. Charley Robert) Debo.

By the way, little nine-year-old Rene' Debo had the misfortune to step on a nail while playing one day this week and suffered a bad laceration to her foot.

For those who won in the various contests at Deercreek Dam Days Festival please hang on with lots of patience and one of these fair days I will get it all put together for print. Patience is the key word!

What should have taken 45 minutes at the most to write has now taken the larger portion of a whole day so be with you again next week, the Lord willing. Take Care.

It is still greetings from Room 9, bed 1 at Berger Hospital but happily I am on the improvement road and may it continue to be so.

Everyone here at Berger is so friendly and helpful and they truly care for the patient's well being, and who can ask for anything more?

There are so many ways in which to sing the praises — the volunteers and volunteers who bring their own special charm and brightness — the hospital employees who sincerely put service and kindness over self and you know, the patients respond to all this by being concerned and caring for one another.

Across the hall from me is Dorothy McGhee whose condition remains quite ill. A former resident of our town she has lived in Washington C. H. for several years.

Liturgical Events Held By St. Joseph

The parish of St. Joseph's Catholic Church held two important liturgical events early this month.

On May 1, the sacrament of Communion was given for the first time to 23 second graders. Fr. Frank Meagher was the celebrant of the Children's Mass held at 11 a.m. on Saturday.

Through a series of preparation classes, the parents had helped prepare their children for this special event. The entire program for this year was under the direction of Mrs. John Raterman.

Berger Hospital Honored By JCAH

As an accredited hospital, Berger Hospital has received recognition from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals (JCAH) in observance of National Hospital Week, May 9-15. The letter of commendation, signed by John D. Porterfield, M.D., Director of the Joint Commission contained the following:

"The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals commends your hospital for striving to deliver the optimum in health care to the community. Your participation in the process of voluntary accreditation is an expression of a professionally motivated commitment to deliver a high quality of patient care. The fact that you are accredited is evidence that your efforts toward this goal are successful."

Accreditation is awarded to hospitals that are found to be in substantial compliance with the Joint Commission's high standards for the quality of patient care provided. The standards are considered to be optimal achievable and represent goals of excellence against which a facility can measure itself and be measured by the Joint Commission's accreditation survey team.

Voluntary accreditation has made a significant contribution to this country's unmatched excellence in health care. It continues the American tradition of self-reliance and it supports the belief that positive motivation is the most effective impetus to change.

The Joint Commission, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary during America's bicentennial year, was founded in 1951 by its present member organizations: the American College of Surgeons, the American College of Physicians, the American Hospital Association, and the American Medical Association. In addition to the Hospital Accreditation Program, the Joint Commission has established accreditation councils for psychiatric facilities, long term care facilities, facilities for the mentally retarded, and ambulatory health care facilities.

VFY Holds Idea Exchange With City School Officials

IDEA EXCHANGE — Present at the meeting between Pickaway County Volunteer For Youth workers and members of the Circleville City School system were, from the left, Diane Berger, VFY president; Fritz Jacobs, superintendent of city schools; Edith Downing, coordinator; and Tom Fitzgerald, program chairman.

Members of Pickaway County Volunteers for Youth met Wednesday evening with representatives of the Circleville City School System to exchange ideas on how to work jointly with students who have adjustment problems.

Diane Berger, president of VFY, explained the history of the volunteer organization and its purpose, then opened the meeting for discussion.

Superintendent Fritz Jacobs began with the observation that although VFY provides a valuable service to the young people involved, there are many students badly in need of help who are not eligible to receive one-to-one attention under existing programs.

VFY works only with boys and girls who have been placed on probation by the juvenile court. Greg Brown noted that Big Brothers work only with boys whose fathers are deceased or living in another area.

Thus, students who "have some very definite, identifiable problems that we would welcome help with," according to Atwater Principal Roger Born, are not receiving the kind of help they need. Born expressed the opinion that many of these students, if helped soon enough, might never need to be brought to the attention of the court.

Darwin Whitehead, principal of S. Court St. School, indicated that "the majority of teachers do a good job of identifying problems, and then they try to seek help."

Volunteer Liz Musser, also a reading specialist at Circleville Junior High commented that it was encouraging to note how many teachers do voluntarily counsel with students after school.

Bob Bensonhaver expressed appreciation for the cooperation he has received from principal Walter Owens and a number of teachers at the Junior High in working through some of the problems with the students probationer. Tom Fitzgerald remarked that he, too, had found school personnel quite willing to help.

Elementary Supervisor Don Metzler noted that positive reinforcement is stressed and that behavior modification techniques are used throughout the school system. However, he added that there are some behaviors which can not be ignored and on occasion students so disruptive that no one in the class can profit must be removed.

These students are provided with home instruction or if warranted, are bussed to special schools in Columbus which serve emotionally disturbed or otherwise handicapped children. To Mrs. Downing's inquiry about the system's policy on truancy, Paul Sarchet, principal of the high school, replied that the procedure followed is that required by state law. He expressed the opinion that Circleville City Schools is one of the few systems which chooses to uphold the law, stating that many school systems ignore truancy.

Secondary supervisor Roger Wolfe inquired as to what the volunteer does to help the probationer. Mrs. Berger responded that the scope of what volunteers do is very broad and is determined by the individual needs of the probationer. But the basic function of a volunteer is to be there when the probationer has a problem he can not deal with on his own. Steve Stevenson added that "We help them in the decision making process, but do not make decisions for them."

In response to an inquiry about the involvement of the probationer's family, Marsha Schneider replied that the volunteer tries to establish a positive relationship with the family, but noted that this is not always possible. The goal of the volunteer must be to help the probationer learn to function responsibly within his family structure as it is, for the volunteer can not change the structure.

Diane Berger concluded the meeting by expressing the hope that VFY will be able to expand in the future to function in the area of prevention as well as rehabilitation.

Other school officials present were Elsie Updyke, principal of Mound St. School, and Gary Wasmer, Nicholas Dr. and Corwin St. principal. Other members of VFY who attended are Nanci Dettra, Phyllis Meena, Ramona Edman, Joyce Sobatoka, LeMoyné and Clifford VanVliet, and Tom Downing.

Volunteer Liz Musser, also a reading specialist at Circleville Junior High commented that it was encouraging to note how many teachers do voluntarily counsel with students after school.

Bob Bensonhaver expressed appreciation for the cooperation he has received from principal Walter Owens and a number of teachers at the Junior High in working through some of the problems with the students probationer. Tom Fitzgerald remarked that he, too, had found school personnel quite willing to help.

Elementary Supervisor Don Metzler noted that positive reinforcement is stressed and that behavior modification techniques are used throughout the school system. However, he added that there are some behaviors which can not be ignored and on occasion students so disruptive that no one in the class can profit must be removed.

These students are provided with home instruction or if warranted, are bussed to special schools in Columbus which serve emotionally disturbed or otherwise handicapped children.

To Mrs. Downing's inquiry about the system's policy on truancy, Paul Sarchet, principal of the high school, replied that the procedure followed is that required by state law. He expressed the opinion that Circleville City Schools is one of the few systems which chooses to uphold the law, stating that many school systems ignore truancy.

Secondary supervisor Roger Wolfe inquired as to what the volunteer does to help the probationer. Mrs. Berger responded that the scope of what volunteers do is very broad and is determined by the individual needs of the probationer. But the basic function of a volunteer is to be there when the probationer has a problem he can not deal with on his own. Steve Stevenson added that "We help them in the decision making process, but do not make decisions for them."

In response to an inquiry about the involvement of the probationer's family, Marsha Schneider replied that the volunteer tries to establish a positive relationship with the family, but noted that this is not always possible. The goal of the volunteer must be to help the probationer learn to function responsibly within his family structure as it is, for the volunteer can not change the structure.

Diane Berger concluded the meeting by expressing the hope that VFY will be able to expand in the future to function in the area of prevention as well as rehabilitation.

Other school officials present were Elsie Updyke, principal of Mound St. School, and Gary Wasmer, Nicholas Dr. and Corwin St. principal. Other members of VFY who attended are Nanci Dettra, Phyllis Meena, Ramona Edman, Joyce Sobatoka, LeMoyné and Clifford VanVliet, and Tom Downing.

It is impossible to name all the people who donated their time to make the meet a complete success as we are sure to miss someone. But, if you were there, you know who we are talking about and if you weren't, you sure missed a tremendous sporting event.

And last but not least—We must give credit to the Circleville Athletic Booster Club for the fine variety of food and drink available to the crowd.

It just put the icing on the cake for a fine afternoon—So thanks to all of you who made it a top notch affair.

We would like to thank the managers in the Circleville Youth Baseball Program who have been getting the game sheets to us on time and for adding the boys first names, which makes our job a little easier.

Our "fearless" forecast—Pickaway County will be represented in the District AA baseball tournament and we don't see how we can lose this prediction . . . Good luck to both Circleville and Logan Elm for a job well done.

Until next time, have a nice day-be a good sport.

The Tigers strong righthander was in control all the way as he scattered six hits, walked three and fanned six. Watkins lone tally came in the bottom of the first inning.

Circleville tallied twice in the top of the first, added one in the third and scored three runs in both the fifth and sixth inning.

In the fifth, Mancini and Bumgarner both singles and scored on Jerry Strawser's long double. Strawser crossed the plate on an error.

Frank Merrill of Circleville set a record in the 880-yard run in this year's league meet with a time of 1:59.85.

Nets Win ABA Title; Hard Fight

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — The New York Nets were struggling.

They had fallen 22 points behind the Denver Nuggets with 5:07 remaining in the third quarter of the sixth game of their American Basketball Association championship series.

Their shooting was off-target. Their offense was disorganized. The Nuggets, particularly David Thompson and Dan Issel, were destroying their defense.

The situation appeared hopeless ... and it seemed a seventh and deciding game would have to be played in Denver Sunday.

Then, suddenly, the game turned. They began to close the gap. And they were gathering momentum.

The Nuggets, in the championship series for the first time, were coming apart at the seams.

By the end of the third quarter, Denver's lead was down to 92-78. And one period later, the Nets had completed their incredible surge from behind, beating the shocked and frustrated Nuggets 112-106 Thursday night.

The victory gave the Nets the series 4-2 and was their second championship in three years.

Claim Beef Specs For Gls Too Rigid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon specifications for beef served to servicemen are too rigid, drive up the price of military meat and cost taxpayers unnecessary millions of dollars each year, a congressional auditor says.

Bulldozer Operator Wins Lottery

CLEVELAND (AP) — For 23 years, Clifford Cavender has been operating bulldozers and gradalls in the summer and snow plows in the winter for the City of Warren.

Now, the 59-year-old Cavender says, he's ready to retire, and after Thursday night's Ohio lottery drawing he'll have $1,000 a month for his retirement years.

The heavy equipment operator is guaranteed that much — with a minimum of $400,000 — as top prize in the weekly Buckeye 1,000 contest.

"I always said if and when I did win I'd retire," said Cavender, who outlasted seven other contestants on the televised game. He said he likes to golf and "I'll probably get a few more games in than I did before."

The second prize of $10,000 went to Louis Cayceia of Hubbard.

Other winners included Glen Hardiman, Lorain $7,500; Elwood Elkins, Mainesville, $5,000; Stephen V. Chismar, Youngstown, $4,000; Joy Dawson, Piqua, $3,000; Wanda Landis, Strasburg, $2,000; Granville Dupuy, Cincinnati, $1,000.

Scioto Commandery Holds Carryin

Scioto Commandery 35, Knights Templar held a carry in dinner Thursday for members and their wives at the Masonic Temple.

Following the dinner, the ladies were entertained by Mrs. Charles Schieber who presented a slide narrative of a European trip.

The next session of the Commandery will be May 20, when past commanders will present the ritualistic work, assisted by the 1976 officers.

On June 10, the Commandery will hold another carry-in dinner at 6:30 p.m. for members and their families. This will also be the annual election of the officers for the year and the annual installation.

Accounting Office said today military meat-buying requirements are "unusual and confusing," making the meat purchased by the Defense Department far more expensive than that bought by other government institutions.

Gutmann made the comments in testimony prepared for a Senate Government Operations subcommittee's third day of hearings into a multimillion-dollar military meat purchasing scandal.

The panel is studying allegations that officials of two New England meat-packing houses sold substandard beef to the military while paying Army inspectors with bribes, gifts and other favors, including prostitutes.

Also to testify today were Army Secretary Martin R. Hoffman and Ferdinand Romano, former general manager of the G&G Packing Co. of Boston. Romano has been granted immunity from prosecution by the subcommittee to testify against his former employers.

Gutmann said the GAO, an investigatory wing of Congress, concluded that the high price paid by the military for beef is a direct result of "stringent requirements" that need to be eased.

As an example, he said the Defense Department and the Veterans Administration both awarded contracts for 30,000 pounds of diced beef on the same day last October. But he said the military paid $1.54 per pound and the VA paid $1.12 per pound.

In another instance, he said, both agencies bought approximately the same amount of pot roasts, but the military paid $1.80 per pound and the VA paid $1.19 per pound.

"If these differences were applicable to the total defense purchases of diced beef and pot roast for fiscal year 1975, the Defense Department paid an excess $9.4 million for these cuts of beef," Gutmann said.

Witnesses have told the panel that the G&G firm in Boston and Blue-Ribbon Frozen Foods of Hamden, Conn., were using ungraded and inferior cuts of beef to fill Army orders for choice steaks and roasts and that the Pentagon paid as much as $3.85-a-pound for these cuts.

Panel chairman Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., calculated that the meatpackers allegedly involved sometimes made up to $192,000 a day in illegal profits in 1974 and 1975.

In testimony Wednesday, six Army officers — from Capt. James O. Flom, who headed the Army's Boston food-inspection unit, to Maj. Gen. Spurgeon H. Neel Jr., commander of the Army Health Services Command — denied knowledge of the alleged bribes, gifts and other favors.

Antique Auto Race Slated

CLEVELAND (AP) — Antique car buff M. Steven Potash says aged vehicles which are competing in the Istanbul-to San Francisco race should have little trouble covering the European leg of the journey.

Potash, of Cleveland, toured 11 European nations to pave the way for the four classic cars now being shipped to Istanbul for the start of the race. He said he found the roads in very good condition but noted that the "Rembrandts of the Road" will meet a stiff test in the Alps.

"Even modern vehicles feel the effect of touring the Alps at an altitude of 10,000 feet," Potash said.

He said the Swiss Auto Club will award Altitude Certificates for best performances close to the clouds.

U.S. Stands Firm On Stockpile Plan

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — American delegates at the fourth United Nations Conference on Trade and Development say they want to avoid a blowup that could harm President Ford's campaign in the presidential primaries.

But Ronald Reagan's victories "underscore the fact that we cannot go any farther than we have already," one representative of the Ford administration said.

"We have consulted with Congress and have broad congressional support," this American said. "But Secretary of State Kissinger made it clear to ministers in Nairobi that this is not just our opening position — this is it."

Kissinger in his speech to the conference last Thursday made what appeared to be one major concession to the Third-World countries. He offered to negotiate a plan for the stockpiling of raw materials to stabilize prices.

But in the week since the U.S. delegation has made clear it is opposed to the key point in the stockpile proposal the underdeveloped countries have made. This calls for a price-stabilizing fund to assemble stockpiles of 10 basic raw materials that provide 80 per cent of the Third World's exports. The fund would sell when the price of a commodity rose and buy when it fell.

The fund would be administered by an international agency, possibly UNCTAD, and the voting majority would be held by Third-World members. U.S. delegates said this would mean a major shift in control, from the industrial buyers to the producing sellers.

"We think the fund is unnecessary. We don't think there are that many commodities that can be stockpiled physically," said Paul Boeker, a U.S. deputy assistant secretary of state.

The United States is urging an extension to other commodities of the one-thing-at-a-time bargaining that has produced individual pricing agreements on tin, coffee and cocoa.

French Finance Minister Jean Pierre Fourcade suggested a compromise: individual agreements on several commodities be drawn up during the next two years, with a central coordinating fund to be created later. He urged that new commodity arrangements be kept within the framework of the World Bank, in which the industrial nations hold voting control.

But other delegates reported that seven nations, including six oil producers, might not wait for an agreement and pledge a total of $300 million to the commodity stockpile fund. The idea would be to bypass the UNCTAD debate and put pressure on the industrial nations to accept the producer nations' proposal.

Man Pleads Innocent In Deaths

CELINA, Ohio (AP) — A man pleaded innocent Thursday to charges of vehicular homicide and other traffic violations stemming from the March 7 accident in which eight high school students were killed.

John Kremer, 21, of Maria Stein entered pleas of innocent to eight counts of vehicular homicide and two counts of running a stop sign and not maintaining clear distance.

Municipal Court Judge James W. Myers said a pretrial conference will be set and Kremer will face a jury. No dates were scheduled.

The accident occurred at a rural intersection in western Ohio when a group of Minster High School students in a caravan stopped.

The teen-agers, who were celebrating a basketball victory, got out of their cars to discuss plans to attend a party when Kremer's car drove through a stop sign and plowed into the group, authorities said.

The charges were filed against Kremer by the Highway Patrol. Vehicular homicide, a misdemeanor, carries a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Myers cautioned reporters at the court session about their coverage of the case, although he said the situation is newsworthy. "The more publicity, the less chance Kremer has for a fair and impartial jury," the judge said.

Claim Beef Specs For Gls Too Rigid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon specifications for beef served to servicemen are too rigid, drive up the price of military meat and cost taxpayers unnecessary millions of dollars each year, a congressional auditor says.

Bulldozer Operator Wins Lottery

CLEVELAND (AP) — For 23 years, Clifford Cavender has been operating bulldozers and gradalls in the summer and snow plows in the winter for the City of Warren.

Now, the 59-year-old Cavender says, he's ready to retire, and after Thursday night's Ohio lottery drawing he'll have $1,000 a month for his retirement years.

The heavy equipment operator is guaranteed that much— with a minimum of $400,000—as top prize in the weekly Buckeye 1,000 contest.

"I always said if and when I did win I'd retire," said Cavender, who outlasted seven other contestants on the televised game. He said he likes to golf and "I'll probably get a few more games in than I did before."

The second prize of $10,000 went to Louis Cayecia of Hubbard.

Other winners included Glen Hardiman, Lorain $7,500; Elwood Elkins, Mainesville, $5,000; Stephen V. Chismar, Youngstown, $4,000; Joy Dawson, Piqua, $3,000; Wanda Landis, Strasburg, $2,000; Granville Dupuy, Cincinnati, $1,000.

Scioto Commandery Holds Carryin

Scioto Commandery 35, Knights Templar held a carry in dinner Thursday for members and their wives at the Masonic Temple.

Following the dinner, the ladies were entertained by Mrs. Charles Schieber who presented a slide narrative of a European trip.

The next session of the Commandery will be May 20, when past commanders will present the ritualistic work, assisted by the 1976 officers.

On June 10, the Commandery will hold another carry-in dinner at 6:30 p.m. for members and their families. This will also be the annual election of the officers for the year and the annual installation.

Accounting Office said today military meat-buying requirements are "unusual and confusing," making the meat purchased by the Defense Department far more expensive than that bought by other government institutions.

Gutmann made the comments in testimony prepared for a Senate Government Operations subcommittee's third day of hearings into a multimillion-dollar military meat purchasing scandal.

The panel is studying allegations that officials of two New England meat-packing houses sold substandard beef to the military while playing Army inspectors with bribes, gifts and other favors, including prostitutes.

Also to testify today were Army Secretary Martin R. Hoffman and Ferdinand Romano, former general manager of the G&G Packing Co. of Boston. Romano has been granted immunity from prosecution by the subcommittee to testify against his former employers.

Gutmann said the GAO, an investigatory wing of Congress, concluded that the high price paid by the military for beef is a direct result of "stringent requirements" that need to be eased.

As an example, he said the Defense Department and the Veterans Administration both awarded contracts for 30,000 pounds of diced beef on the same day last October. But he said the military paid $1.54 per pound and the VA paid $1.12 per pound.

In another instance, he said, both agencies bought approximately the same amount of pot roasts, but the military paid $1.80 per pound and the VA paid $1.19 per pound.

"If these differences were applicable to the total defense purchases of diced beef and pot roast for fiscal year 1975, the Defense Department paid an excess $9.4 million for these cuts of beef," Gutmann said.

Witnesses have told the panel that the G&G firm in Boston and Blue-Ribbon Frozen Foods of Hamden, Conn., were using ungraded and inferior cuts of beef to fill Army orders for choice steaks and roasts and that the Pentagon paid as much as $3.85-a-pound for these cuts.

Panel chairman Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., calculated that the meatpackers allegedly involved sometimes made up to $192,000 a day in illegal profits in 1974 and 1975.

In testimony Wednesday, six Army officers — from Capt. James O. Flom, who headed the Army's Boston food-inspection unit, to Maj. Gen. Spurgeon H. Neel Jr., commander of the Army Health Services Command — denied knowledge of the alleged bribes, gifts and other favors.

Antique Auto Race Slated

CLEVELAND (AP) — Antique car buff M. Steven Potash says aged vehicles which are competing in the Istanbul-to San Francisco race should have little trouble covering the European leg of the journey.

Potash, of Cleveland, toured 11 European nations to pave the way for the four classic cars now being shipped to Istanbul for the start of the race. He said he found the roads in very good condition but noted that the "Rembrandts of the Road" will meet a stiff test in the Alps.

"Even modern vehicles feel the effect of touring the Alps at an altitude of 10,000 feet," Potash said.

He said the Swiss Auto Club will award Altitude Certificates for best performances close to the clouds.

Prom Plans Completed

By DEBBIE BUTLER
"Treasure Island" is the theme of the 1976 junior-senior prom tomorrow night in the Circleville High School gym from 8 to 11:30 p.m. The band is "Divine Comedy."
The juniors sponsor this special occasion, and this year's chairman is Betsy Ankrom.

The entrance will be decorated as a dock with pirates. The bandstand is a shipwreck. The center consists of an island which blends in with a sunset, volcano, and jungle scene found on the walls. The refreshment stand is a hut.

The after-prom will be the coliseum from 1 a.m. to 4 a.m. It is free of charge and everybody must be checked in by 12:30 a.m. No one will be permitted to re-enter.

The coliseum will be decorated as a casino. There will be card games, dancing contest and door prizes! The entertainment will be provided by "Gold Rush," a local band consisting of Scott and Jeff Linn, Mike Mills, Gregg Strawser, and Rob Gans. Parents of the junior class sponsor the after-prom.

"I was amazed at being chosen, for this is my first year. I can feel that it's going to be a good season for the guys," were Deanna Moore's first words when asked how she felt about being chosen cheerleader for the first time. Deanna lives at home with her parents and four brothers and sisters.

Connie Royster exclaimed, "I'm very excited about being chosen and I can't wait until next year to cheer for a winning team!" This is also Connie's first year cheering for the teams. She resides with her parents and has one sister and one brother.

The girls are all anticipating a great season next year on the floor, and said they hope the student body will all be out to support the teams.

New Fighting Threatened In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian guerrilla factions headed by Yasir Arafat threatened today to take up arms against Syrian President Hafez Assad's forces in Lebanon.

Arafat's high command charged regular Syrian troops shelled and rocketed leftist strongholds in Beirut. Meanwhile, Syrian-controlled Palestinians in Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city, continued their attacks on leftist Lebanese Moslem militiamen for the fifth day.

"Bodies of victims are still unrecovered from the streets," a police spokesman reported. "There are even coffins left on sidewalks because continued fighting interrupted funeral processions for those killed in the last four days."

The spokesman said at least 67 persons were killed and 119 wounded during the night on all fronts, raising the estimated toll in the 13-month-old civil war to 18,600 dead.

"The Palestinian Command asserts it stands fast in one trench with Lebanon's nationalist movement against any attempt to liquidate or domesticate it," said a statement issued after an eight-hour meeting of Arafat and the commanders of the factions in his guerrilla movement.

"The Palestinian Command urges brothers in the Syrian leadership to reconsider their policies and head off bloody strife between Syria on the one hand and the Palestinian revolution and the Nationalist Lebanese Movement on the other."

Rhodes Aides Seek Confirmation

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Gov. James A. Rhodes' two remaining unconfirmed cabinet members are taking steps to avert the fate of former Welfare Director Raymond McKenna's who was ousted by the Senate.

Both men, Natural Resources Director Robert W. Teater, and Transportation Director Richard Jackson, deny they are actively lobbying for their jobs. But each appears to be treading softly after majority Democrats voted down McKenna, the first Rhodes cabinet appointment to be rejected.

In an April 30 letter to Senate Majority Whip Harry Meshel, D-33 Youngstown, Teater apologized profusely for rhetoric he used last December in a dispute with Meshel over layoffs in the department.

"Senator Meshel, I offer my apologies for a letter that was written in poor taste and one which unfairly questioned the motives of your authority as a member of the Ohio General Assembly," Teater wrote. "I trust you will accept this apology so that together we might move forward in the very important work ahead of us."

Meshel said Teater was "just trying to get confirmed" and added that he planned to vote against him.

Teater had complained in the earlier letter to Meshel that the Mahoning County lawmaker had flaunted his authority by holding up natural resources requests before the State Controlling Board because of questions about layoffs.

Teater said Thursday he didn't feel "it was my place" to actively solicit support in the Senate. "There have been a few offers of help for me if I would do a few things," he said. "There's no way, I would buy my appointment."

Teater described these proposals as "round-about" or indirect feelers from legislators about DNR projects in their districts.

Jackson met Wednesday with Senate Majority Leader Oliver Ocasek, D-28 Akron. Ocasek announced Thursday that the Transportation Department would begin work this summer on a $155,000 safety project at the intersection of Ohio 8 and Twinsburg Road in his Summit County district.

"I think it appropriate to thank Director Jackson and the members of his staff for their concern and cooperation," the Senate leader said.

"My position is that that is their responsibility and I'm just doing my job," Jackson said in an interview, prior to the meeting with Ocasek.

"I would like very much to be confirmed," he added, while noting that the meeting had not been arranged to discuss his status.

Jackson and Teater both came under fire in the legislature because of wide-scale layoffs in their departments last year, which some Democrats charged were politically motivated. Republicans defended the layoffs as an economic necessity.

Custer's Last Stand Still Brings Dispute

NEW RUMLEY, Ohio (AP) — Custer's Last Stand may need an epilogue after residents of Gen. George A. Custer's birthplace and Indians are through fighting over a statue of the flamboyant and controversial Indian fighter.

Custer was born here in 1839 and the residents of this Harrison County town erected a monument in his memory on a one-acre park in 1931.

A Columbus-based organization, Native Americans Mending Errors (NAME), has now asked the Ohio Historical Society to remove the life-size statue of Custer, charging that it is "an insult and an outrage for Ohio to honor this man."

While the request to tear down the statue will be considered at a May 21 meeting, the society granted permission for the group to stage a demonstration in the park on May 30.

Meanwhile, some of the town's 152 residents have vowed to oppose any attempts to take down the statue. Robert Custer, 58, a fourth cousin of the general, said that although his distant relative "did some things that were wrong...that's no reason to take the statue down. There are two sides to a war."

"Custer's Last Stand" refers to the battle of the Little Big Horn when Indians killed Custer and his full command of 260 soldiers. Before the June 25, 1876 battle on the Montana plains, Custer had gained a reputation for his western campaigns against the Indians. About eight years before the battle, he and his troops destroyed an entire village of Indians.

A member of NAME, who identified himself as Blue Hawk, called Custer "a murderer." Besides staging a demonstration, the group also was granted permission to erect a "sweat lodge" in which to perform a religious purification ceremony.

The group's wish to remove the statue was called ridiculous by Harold Flowers, a New Rumley resident. "I think those Indians might get scalped if they try to take that statue down," he said. "It'll be the Little Big Horn again, only the other way around."

Views On Television

NEW YORK (AP) — "It is my devout wish to bring emotional depression into the open and so treat it as one does a physical infirmity ... it must be treated, and the sooner the better."

So wrote ex-astronaut "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. in "return to Earth," a book in which he told of his quiet struggle to overcome emotional illness two years after becoming the second man in history to walk on the moon.

The book, which he co-authored with newsman Wayne Warga, now is a television movie starring Cliff Robertson as Aldrin and Shirley Knight as his wife, Joan. It'll be on ABC this Friday night and we urge you to see it.

It isn't a simplistic heroes-are-human yarn. It's a subtle, sympathetic, story of how one man acclaimed as a hero realized he had an emotional problem, how it affected him and his family and how he coped with it.

Most of Aldrin's book was devoted to his boyhood life, his Air Force career and what happened to him in the space program before, during and immediately after his historic Apollo 11 flight in July 1969.

In Friday's movie, the emphasis is on the last part of the book, which deals with his affair with a New York divorcee named Marianne, the psychiatric help he sought for acute depression after Apollo 11 and the disintegration of his 17-year marriage to Joan.

As Aldrin, Robertson does a superb, finely shaded job of depicting the gradual deterioration of a once supremely confident man now slowly withdrawing from the pressure of fame and a life-long desire to excel.

The tone is set early in the film, when he meets the divorcee — played by Stefanie Powers — at an aerospace industry dinner here. He tells her NASA prepared its astronauts well for the trip from earth.

"But they didn't prepare us for the return — that's the funny thing," he muses, speaking in a vague, detached, uncertain manner that becomes more pronounced as the story of his return continues.

Assigned as commandant of the Aerospace School at Edwards Air Force Base in California, he secretly seeks psychiatric help.

He tells his psychiatrist, "I'm not having fun anymore. There's no challenges, no goals. It's useless."

The treatment briefly helps. His spirits rebound, he wants a fresh start, wants to divorce Joan, the mother of his three children, and marry Marianne. It does no good that his doctor warns him "the other side of depression is an excessive sense of well-being."

But Aldrin's euphoria soon collapses when, after he tells his wife he wants a divorce, Marianne tells him she doesn't want to get married (in his book he says she married another man she dated during their affair).

Your Horoscope

By FRANCIS DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR SATURDAY
ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 20): You can have what you want if you work carefully and with consideration for others. Neither attack nor retreat, but go forth calmly and you WILL achieve.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 to May 21): Where your instinct strongly dictates, first make sure, but then DO act, and deliberately, in your innately well-disposed manner. Artistry under splendid influences.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21): Everyday matters may give most concern. Employ "tried and true" methods in areas where you must act but have little to go on for reference. Your staying power will aid you.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23): Resoluteness and determination will put this day in the winning column. Weed out certain undesirable attachments, practices, methods.

LEO (July 24 to Aug. 23): Emphasize: dependability, referral to others' ideas, building a store of usable data, facts. Avoid: making decisions without reflection, overoptimism.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23): You may be too volatile, displaying nervousness and anxiety. This is not like the REAL you. Give yourself a pep talk and get in there and pitch - with your usual self-confidence.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23): A day for listening well and voicing well-considered opinions. Take stock of why certain maneuvers and tactics did not succeed in the past and avoid them now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22): Fine Mars influences! With initiative and enterprise, more than usual can be achieved. Day will definitely respond to imagination, aggressiveness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21): Do not become frustrated over possible delays or disappointments. With your innate intelligence and ingenuity, you can change any undesirable situations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): A day in which to get away from routine. New scenes, new people, new activities could spark a brand new interest in your life, make it more stimulating.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You will find the "little" things rewarding now. Don't look for the spectacular. Be satisfied with even small benefits.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): A different outlook will help you improve relations with family, friends. Insight may come through your highly intuitive faculties; more flexibility through the erasure of past concepts.

YOU BORN TODAY are an idealist and a humanitarian at heart. You are imaginative, intuitive, poetic and something of a dreamer.

Views On Television

NEW YORK (AP)—"It is my devout wish to bring emotional depression into the open and so treat it as one does a physical infirmity... it must be treated, and the sooner the better."

So wrote ex-astronaut "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. in "return to Earth," a book in which he told of his quiet struggle to overcome emotional illness two years after becoming the second man in history to walk on the moon.

The book, which he co-authored with newsman Wayne Wraga, now is a television movie starring Cliff Robertson as Aldrin and Shirley Knight as his wife, Joan. It'll be on ABC this Friday night and we urge you to see it.

It isn't a simplistic heroes-are-human yarn. It's a subtle, sympathetic, story of how one man acclaimed as a hero realized he had an emotional problem, how it affected him and his family and how he coped with it.

Most of Aldrin's book was devoted to his boyhood life, his Air Force career and what happened to him in the space program before, during and immediately after his historic Apollo 11 flight in July 1969.

In Friday's movie, the emphasis is on the last part of the book, which deals with his affair with a New York divorcee named Marianne, the psychiatric help he sought for acute depression after Apollo 11 and the disintegration of his 17-year marriage to Joan.

As Aldrin, Robertson does a superb, finely shaded job of depicting the gradual deterioration of a once supremely confident man now slowly withdrawing from the pressure of fame and a life-long desire to excel.

The tone is set early in the film, when he meets the divorcee — played by Stefanie Powers — at an aerospace industry dinner here. He tells her NASA prepared its astronauts well for the trip from earth.

"But they didn't prepare us for the return — that's the funny thing," he muses, speaking in a vague, detached, uncertain manner that becomes more pronounced as the story of his return continues.

Assigned as commandant of the Aerospace School at Edwards Air Force Base in California, he secretly seeks psychiatric help.

He tells his psychiatrist, "I'm not having fun anymore. There're no challenges, no goals. It's useless."

The treatment briefly helps. His spirits rebound, he wants a fresh start, wants to divorce Joan, the mother of his three children, and marry Marianne. It does no good that his doctor warns him "the other side of depression is an excessive sense of well-being."

But Aldrin's euphoria soon collapses when, after he tells his wife he wants a divorce, Marianne tells him she doesn't want to get married (in his book he says she married another man she dated during their affair).

House Hit
By Thieves

About $1,200 in jewelry and cash was taken from the 24103 Route 104 home of James L. Stevens Thursday night between 7:30 and 11:15 p.m.

Pickaway County Sheriff's Detective Don Thompson and Deputy Larry Kellenberger collected fingerprint samples from the home in an attempt to identify the thieves, who they believe have burglarized other homes in Circleville and Pickaway County.

The thieves apparently tried to gain entry through other doors in the dwelling before prying their way inside through a door on the breeze way.

They took items from a spare bedroom, master bedroom, and living room, and also disconnected the amplifier inside the telephone.

Merchandise taken included a pearl necklace with two emeralds in a gold setting, several rolls of coins and a roll of $2 bills, a J.C. Penny portable color television set, and two jewelry boxes with contents.

Sheriff's Car
Develops Short

An electrical short disabled a Pickaway County Sheriff's cruiser Thursday night. However, the extent of the damage is undetermined, pending inspection by a mechanic.

Deputy Sheriff Billy Huffman Jr. was driving the car, number 65-09, when he smelled smoke inside the vehicle about 9:30 p.m.

The officer, who had been making a security check of the Washington Twp. School, drove to the intersection of the Stoutsville Pike and Winstead Road in an attempt to find a less congested area.

The smoke was apparently coming from the steering column.

The Clearcreek Volunteer Fire Department was summoned to the scene, although there was no evidence of a fire, and disconnected the battery cable.

The car was towed to a local garage for inspection.

Woman Gets
New House

CLEVELAND (AP) — The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) is going to do the right thing by Sarah Turner, who says the dream house she bought with HUD's blessing seven years ago turned into a nightmare.

Charles Lucas, director of HUD's insuring office, said the department is taking the unusual step of giving Mrs. Turner a replacement house. Lucas said it was part of the government's program to compensate for housing deficiencies which were not discovered by inspectors from 1968 through 1973.

Altogether, Lucas said, the government is paying out about $670,000 to Northeastern Ohio residents for repairs. The government received more than 2,800 complaints, and one-third of them were found to be valid, Lucas said.

Mrs. Turner said she spent 3,000 in electrical and other repairs for the double home on Ambler Avenue on Cleveland's East Side, which she purchased for $11,000. HUD said it will replace that house with one on Mount Overlook Avenue valued at $14,000, giving Mrs. Turner $3,000 worth of equity.

Columbus Fire
Contract Approved

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Fire fighters voted three-to-one Thursday to accept a new contract with the city even though the agreement did not contain a work-week reduction they had fought for.

Firemen were to receive the same 6 per cent raise this year, retroactive to April 4, which policemen had accepted. Over the 30 months of the pact, fire fighters' wages would rise 19 per cent.

Negotiations began last November and were marked by a sickout, informational picketing and a wives' march on city hall.
